Cherokee Schools changes menus, attitudes to meet federal lunch guidelines

By SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

It was 10am on a typical Monday and the buzz of workers prepping food in the Cherokee Central Schools kitchen was palpable. Food service workers were busy cutting fresh fruit and vegetables and preparing healthy meals for the 1,100 students that they serve daily.

This year, however, the menu is a little different.

Changes are being phased in as a result of the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act (HHFKA), a federal law which marks the first changes to school nutrition in over 15 years.

"This is a national change," said Laura Cabe, child nutrition director at Cherokee Central Schools. "It's taken time. We've had all the training, but it has taken time to get it out in the community."

"We are here, number one, for the kids, to feed the kids and educate the families and the students," she said.

Some of the changes have already hit home for some students. Under the current guidelines, perennial favorite peanut butter and jelly sandwiches are gone. "Every student must have a fruit and/or vegetable on their tray."

The changes, at outlined in the HHFKA, will be implemented over a three-year period. According to the USDA, some of the changes to the National School Lunch Program (NSLP) include: daily serving of fruits and vegetables; a weekly requirement for dark green or red/orange vegetables, legumes, starchy and other vegetables; weekly meat plus a daily requirement; and a requirement that half of the offered grains during a week must be whole grains.

Along with the school lunch changes, another big change this year is the ban on fast foods. Trash cans located outside the school are emblazoned with signs stating "Fast Food Stops Here!!!"

Cherokee Central Schools has developed a "Stop Light Guide for Healthy Eating" in which foods are categorized as follows:

- Green foods or go foods "are low in 'bad' saturated and trans fat and calories, but are packed full of nutrients"; examples include – fresh fruits and vegetables, skim milk, baked chicken, dried beans
- Yellow foods or slow foods are "higher in 'bad' fat, added sugar and/or calories, but still have some nutrients"; examples include – juice, white pasta, 2 percent milk, peanut butter
- Red foods or whoa foods "should only be eaten once in a while"; examples include: soft drinks, candy, chips, French fries, fry bread

Cherokee Elementary School has received a USDA Fresh Fruit and Vegetable grant that will help provide fresh fruits and vegetables to students as healthy snacks. "Not only will this help with students being hungry either before or after lunch," said Cabe, "it will help them to understand where their food comes from, how it grows, and how it's prepared."

"It's just going to be very exciting for the kids to see what a star

SCOTT MCKIE B.P./One Feather

Cecelia "Precious" Maney and Natalie Bradley, both in kindergarten at Cherokee Elementary School, enjoy their healthy lunches on Monday, Aug. 13.

fruit is, how it tastes, how a mango tastes."

Christine Bradley, a Cherokee Central Schools food service worker from the Birdtown Community, will be administering the grant.

"As a parent, I think it's great that we're having to do these changes," said the mother of three. "I have a daughter in fifth grade and she loves it. She thinks it's great because she's very health conscious."

Bradley said that education about proper nutrition and food choices must extend to the home as well. "You'll have parents that will come in and bark, 'You're not feeding my kid enough'. But, really, our kids eat too much. Go to McDonald's and it's around 1,500 calories for one meal, and it's not good. Parents need to take more responsibility about what their kids eat."

Yona Wade, Cherokee Central Schools public relations director, jokingly said that we all grew up on pizza and corn. That combination is now gone, and in its place is a pizza, romaine salad with light dressing, baby carrots and watermelon.

"We have no fryers," he said. "Everything is baked, broiled or steamed."

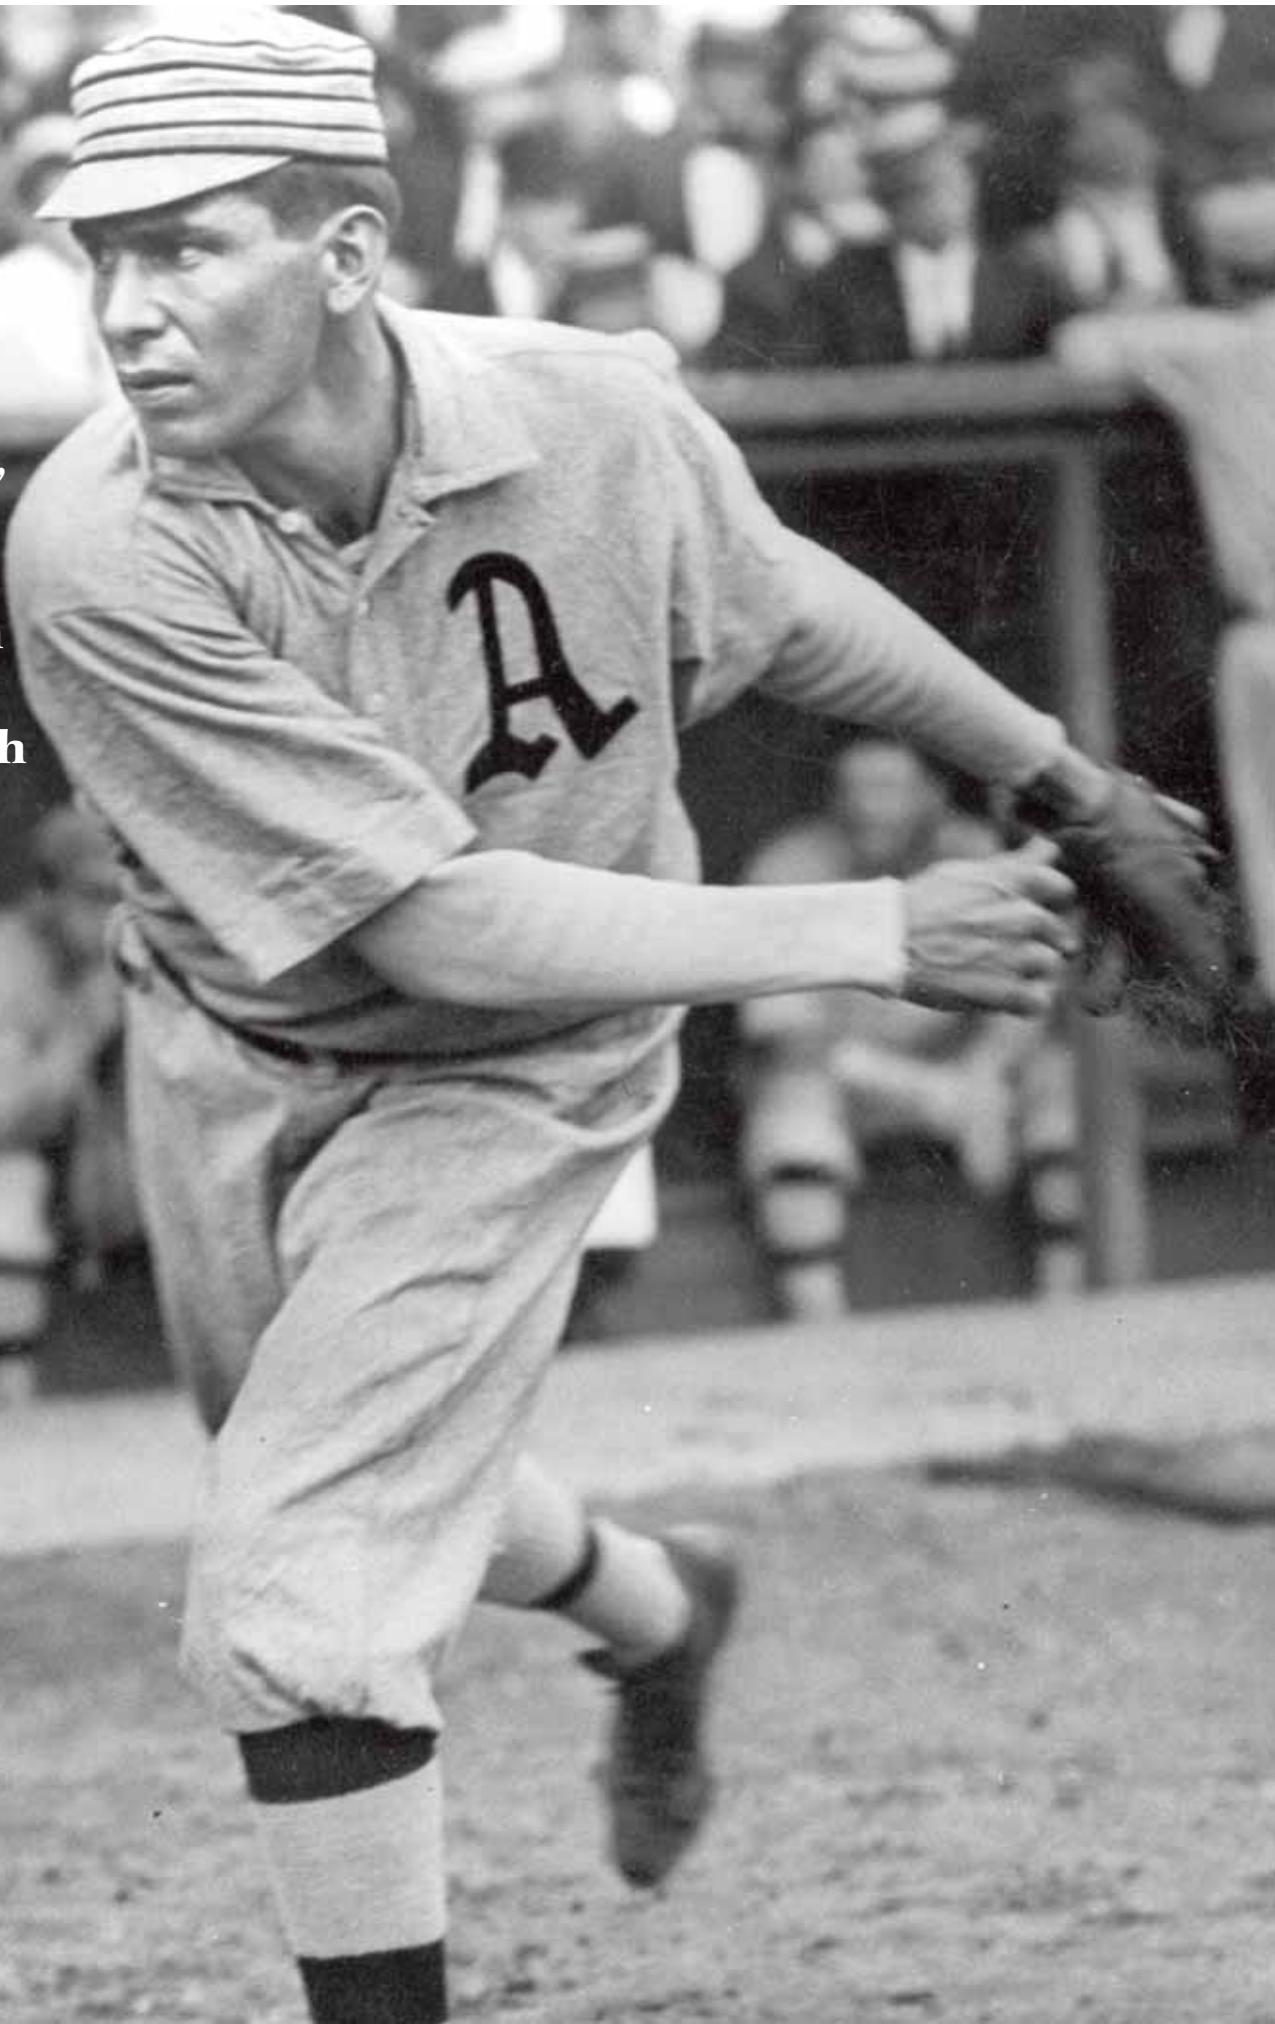

Some are not on board with the changes, and Wade related, "We have no rule against students packing their lunch."

However, he relate that the school's budget funds the Universal Food Program. "If they live on the Boundary and come to our school, they get a free lunch under the program."

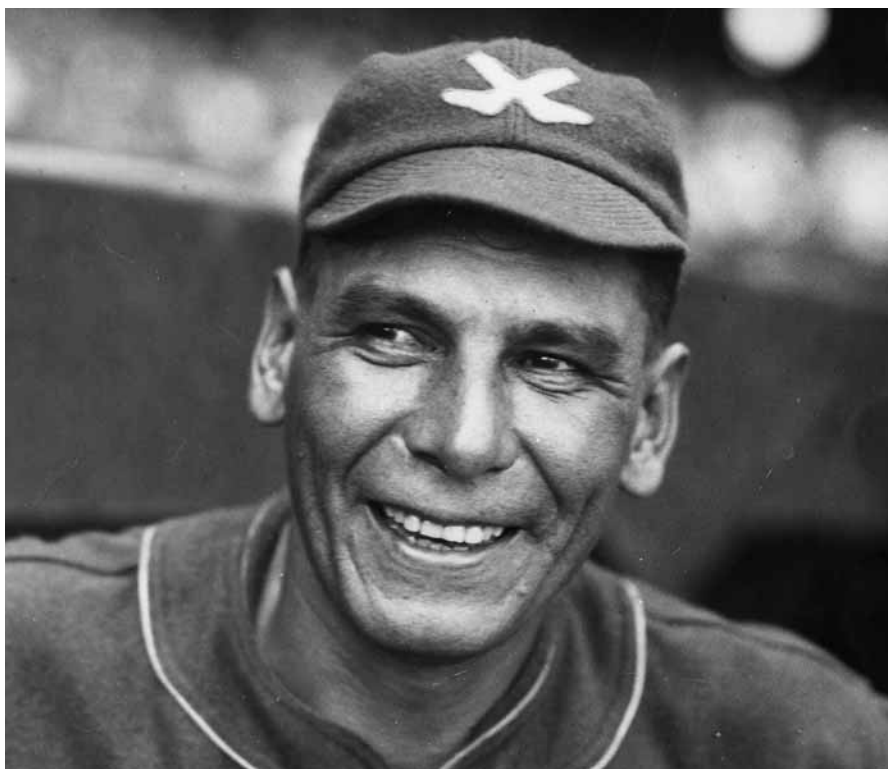

Wade said providing nutrition education to the students is just as important as providing healthy meals because it is knowledge they can take with them through life.

Cabe said her main goal is to be visible in the cafeteria and get feedback from the students. "We've got to work together on this...I want the kids to know, when they leave here, what it means to have a well-balanced diet. The way our plates look now with fresh fruits and vegetables and whole grains is just inspirational."

The 2012 Major League season boosts three Native American players including: Jacoby Ellsbury, Colorado River/Navajo, playing for the Boston Red Sox; Kyle Lohse, Nomlaki Tribe, playing for the St. Louis Cardinals; and Joba Chamberlain, Winnebago, playing for the New York Yankees. These men follow trailblazers Louis Sockalexis, the first Native to become a Major League player; Jim Thorpe, who was also an Olympic gold medalist; and Charles Bender, the first of only two Native American players inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Charles Albert Bender was an Ojibwe born on May 5, 1883 on the White Earth Chippewa Indian Reservation in Brainerd, Minn. The fourth of 12 children, Charles was born to a half-Ojibwe mother, Mary Razor, and a German-American father, Albert Bliss Bender.

Charles was referred to various names including Charles, Albert and Chief but he always signed autographs as "Charley".

After attending Carlisle Indian School in Carlisle, Pennsylvania and Dickinson College, also in Carlisle, Bender pitched for the semi-pro Harrisburg Athletic Club where he was discovered by Jesse Frisinger, the Philadelphia Athletics' scout. He signed a $1,800-a-year contract with Connie Mack, legendary manager, who launched his 16 year career in the major leagues. Bender spent 12 years as a member of the A's early 1900's lineup that included Rube Waddell, Eddie Plank and Jack Coombs.

At the age of 19, in his debut game against the New York Highlanders, Bender threw a four-hit shutout. This was the first of his 17 game wins during his rookie year. During the span of his career, Bender went 212-127. He pitched nine complete games in the World Series and became the first to pitch three complete games in a single World Series. Bender won three World Series titles with the A's and posted the best winning percentage in the American League in three separate seasons. His lifetime ERA was 2.46.

Charles Bender threw, what many have said, one of the best fastballs of his era, but he is known for his slider. In fact, The National Baseball Hall of Fame credits Bender with inventing the slider, a pitch that breaks laterally and down. It's essentially a curveball with extra speed that tends to throw off a batters timing.

Bender entered into baseball at a time in which African Americans were banned from playing organized baseball. Though Native players were not banned they did play in a time of extreme political incorrectness in which society, as a whole, rarely recognized in a respectful manner his Native American heritage.

Instead, he was stereotyped, along with the other Native players in the league, and expected to fit the Hollywood Western ideas of the cowboy and Indian days. He was often referred to as "chief", a nickname Bender was never fond of. The prejudices he and the other Native players encountered included trite war cries and innumerable racial slurs, among other things. Although he took great pride in his Ojibwe background, Bender felt the need to address the issue. In a statement made to the press after his 1905 World Series shutout, he said, "I do not want my name presented to the public as an Indian, but as a baseball pitcher."

The great pitching reputation Bender earned during his career was trumped by the reputation he earned as a level-headed and consistent player. He was not daunted in extreme pressure situations.

Connie Mack once said, "If I had all the men I've ever handled and they were in their prime and there was one game I wanted to win above all others, Albert would be my man."

Lauer's "Indian giver" comment upsets many in Indian Country

By SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

A comment by an NBC personality has many in Indian Country reeling. During a broadcast on Monday, Aug. 6, Matt Lauer, of NBC's Today, used the phrase "Indian giver" during banter with Meredith Vieira.

Jacqueline Pata, National Congress of American Indian executive director, stated, "Matt Lauer of NBC's Today, an international media personality, made irresponsible comments on the global stage of the 2012 Olympic Games when he used the phrase 'Indian Giver' during NBC's morning coverage of the London Olympics. These comments were not in the spirit of the Olympic Games, nor civil discourse."

She went on to explain the origin of the term. "Early commerce be-

"The term invokes a stereotype and inaccuracy about our history that is offensive to Native people."

- statement issued by the Native American Journalists Association

tween tribal nations and colonial settlers required the value of goods exchanged to be of equal or greater value, or the trade was not deemed acceptable. Some colonial traders who did not uphold this ethic used this phrase to discredit tribal nations and Native traders. Now, the pejorative phrase has become associated with a person who takes back a gift. This misrepresents the original and modern cultural values of Native Americans, based on fair trade, sharing and empowering those around them."

The Native American Journalists Association (NAJA) released a statement denouncing the term and its usage. "The term invokes a stereotype and inaccuracy about our history that is offensive to Native people. It should not be used on a national news program, even in a passing reference. NAJA asks that NBC and Lauer apologize for the comment."

The use of the remark wasn't just caught by those in Indian Country, it hit the blogosphere as well. Perez Hilton posted an article on his popular site entitled "Why Matt Lauer's Olympic Racial Slur is Particularly Offensive to Native Americans".

"There are plenty of homophobic and racist slurs that were once used in regular conversations," said Hilton. "Thanks to heightened awareness, most of us have become a little more sensitive to the fact that what means nothing to us may mean a heck of a lot more to somebody else!"

The One Feather sought comment from Lauer and NBC but have not received a response by press time.

Thank you Yogi Crowe Scholarship

As a recipient of the Yogi Crowe Memorial Grant, it is a privilege to publicly express my gratitude towards the board committee and all that have graciously contributed towards my education. For all that are not familiar, this fund has been established as a supplemental award assisting graduate students, whom are enrolled members of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians. More specifically, this grant focuses on assisting with the additional expenses that occur as a full-time, graduate student. For myself, groceries, gas, utilities, rent, car payments, and the care of my dog seemed impossible to maintain without a full-time job.

With their support, I now have a budget that has made all of these responsibilities stress-free, while allotting plenty of time to focus of my coursework.

Ultimately, the Yogi Crowe Memorial Scholarship is seeking tomorrow's leaders, while providing the ideal resource as a representation of their support. As a recipient, their belief in my educational success is an honor, and I cannot speak more highly of the professionalism and dedication of all involved.

For those still contemplating graduate school, I encourage you all to fulfill your dreams! The resources for this fund cannot grow without more grant recipients. Upon obtaining a master's degree, all grant recipients contribute yearly to the Yogi Crowe Memorial Scholarship Fund. A growth in grant recipients will only expand the funding available, as more contributions will be made. Out of 14,639 enrolled members, only 1.5 percent have a Masters/Doctorate Degree. (www.yogicrowememorialscholarship.org) This statistic is incredibly saddening, considering a debt-free education is available to all enrolled members. With the assistance provided through the Yogi Crowe Memorial Scholarship, E.B.C.I., and Qualla Boundary Scholarships; it is clear that betterment of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians is achieved through education.

In closing, the funding from the Yogi Crowe Memorial Scholarship will be utilized as I study to get my Masters in Social Work. I am aspiring to work with Youth-at-risk, and hope to one day start my own non-profit organization. With the support of the Yogi Crowe Memorial Scholarship, I am able to further my passion and I could not be more thankful!

Jessica Crowe

SCGC awards $700 to Yellowhill

Last week, the Seven Clans Grant Council (SCGC) awarded a $700 grant to the Yellowhill Community Club for seating materials. The new chairs will provide excellent seating for all events, fundraisers, etc... The chairs are clearly marked with sponsor labels so that the community can easily spot the new additions. "This youth grant making council is excited to give back by encouraging other programs to come up with new projects and apply for a youth grant each year," said Sky Kanott, Cherokee Youth Council program manager. SCGC is made up of 15 youth who approve/decline applications and decide how much each project will be funded. The youth are very much involved with each grantee and are striving to see more youth oriented funding request each year. Enter Fair Exhibits next month

By SARAH MCCLELLAN-WELCH

Friday, Sept. 28 is the day to enter exhibits for the 2012 Cherokee Indian Fair! The Exhibit hall will be open from 8am - 8pm to accept entries. Fine Cherokee art (baskets, bead work, carving, and other art reflecting Cherokee culture) should be entered with Qualla Arts and Crafts Cooperative. EBCI Cooperative Extension's exhibits feature canning, agriculture, baked goods, sewn items, photography, hobby and youth exhibits.

Exhibit prize lists are available at the Qualla Arts and Crafts Cooperative (Hwy 441) and at the EBCI Cooperative Extension office (Acquoni Rd.). Extension's fair list looks a little different this year. The cover design is similar to the old fair booklets from years ago. Be sure to read through the booklet as some exhibits require the recipe, processing time, or other information be attached.

Extension has two new divisions this year. Based on suggestions from community members, divisions for Special Needs individuals and Senior Elders were created. Special Needs is defined as any EBCI member that qualifies for special needs programs. The Senior Elder category is for fair participants who are age 75 or older. These categories are "open" which means any type of item from the Fair exhibit list can be entered.

The whole family can get involved in the Chief's Cherokee Family Garden Project poster. It's not too late to take pictures of your garden and get a poster ready for the Fair. Estimate the number of vegetables you grew, who worked in the garden, the size of the garden and write a paragraph describing, "How your garden reflects Cherokee traditions and culture".

Now is the time to get ready for the Fair! Collect your art, hobbies, preserved foods and garden produce to enter Friday, Sept. 28. Everyone enjoys visiting the Exhibit Hall to see the beautiful art and clever hobbies at the Fair.

Note: Community Club Exhibit set-up is Saturday, Sept. 29 from 8am - 5pm.

EBCI Community Development

By JANET OWLE

Each year, members of our communities put much time and effort into projects that will better his or her community. Now is the time those community members receive recognition for the work they have done. The only way this can be accomplished is for each community to participate in the annual Community Development Program. Judging will begin on Tuesday, Aug. 21 and a banquet for community officers and members will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 18 from 6-9pm in the Exhibit Hall at the Fair Grounds. If your community would like to participate, please call Valorie Welch 554-6939 or Janet Owle 554-6934 to let us know your community will be participating.

Tribal Child Care attends training

SUBMITTED By
VIRGINIA JOHNSON

The Cherokee Tribal Child Care Services (CTCCS) Program has participated in two weeks of age-appropriate training for Infant/Toddlers and Preschoolers. The Annual Pre-Service training consists of North Carolina Division of Child Development requirements and mandated Head Start/Early Head Start Federal Regulations.

Several topics of training were Child Abuse & Neglect, Inclusion of Special Needs with the Child Care Curriculum, IT SID's training, E-LAP Assessment Tool, Fire Safety Training, Food Handler Requirements, and Communicable Diseases. Staff were also involved in preparing classrooms, materials and home visiting with children and their families. Preparing staff and families means establishing and implementing a structured approach to staff training and development which enhances their skills and knowledge required in fulfilling job responsibilities.

"Although closing the tribal child care program places a hardship on working parents and families, please be assured it provides constructive time for staff to gain the skills and knowledge needed in caring for children," CTCCS officials stated. "Your understanding of our child care program is greatly appreciated. Thank you."

Virginia is the education and training program specialist for the Cherokee Tribal Child Care Services Qualla Boundary Head Start/Early Head Start program.
