According to a report released last week by Deputy Financial Officer Kim Peone, the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians has a net worth of over $700 million. The report, entitled “Budget Highlights Fiscal Year 2014”, reports on the amounts of tribal reserve funds and total net assets along with budget highlights and goals for FY15.

“Our staff has worked diligently to assist tribal programs and entities in determining their budgetary needs, goals and objectives as part of our priority-based budget approach,” Peone said in the report. “In the next fiscal year we have tremendous capacity to continue to shape and strategically plan for the future of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, our service to our members, and our opportunities for economic development and diversification.”

Some of the new initiatives outlined in the report include: adding a fifth grade classroom to the New Kituwah Academy, completing the Justice Center, building the Snowbird Youth Center, expanding the Cherokee Phoenix Theater, building a community pool, building a new Community Center in the Painttown Community, and beginning construction on the new Cherokee Indian Hospital and the new Waste Water Treatment Plant.

“Fiscal Year 2014 will give us an opportunity to plan, identify strategic initiatives, and build a comprehensive roadmap toward sustainability,” said Peone.

Some of the FY2014 goals Peone outlines in the report include:

- Assist the Tribe in the development of a strategic operating plan
- Collaborate with Tribal leadership in setting strategic priorities with multigenerational focus
- Obtain direction from Tribal leadership on new initiatives
- Prepare multi-year capital asset plan and budget
- Plan and develop a budget for new initiatives

“Our Tribe enjoys a level of prosperity that is a beacon for Indian Country,” noted Peone. “We will meet and exceed the required fund balance in General Fund.”

State Bill: Cherokee language recognized by UNC system

By SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

Students in one of the 16 college institutions of the University of North Carolina system will now be able to use Cherokee language to fulfill their foreign language requirement. The North Carolina House passed S444 on Wednesday, July 17 which would "require the constituent institutions of the University of North Carolina to recognize the Cherokee language as a language for which a student may satisfy a foreign language course requirement for degree completion."

The bill, introduced by North Carolina Senators Jim Davis and Andrew Brock, was passed in the Senate on May 13.

"I applaud the North Carolina General Assembly's passage of the new state law that permits students to use the Cherokee language to satisfy a 'foreign' language requirement for institutions of the UNC system," said Principal Chief Michell Hicks who thanked House Speaker Thom Tillis and President Pro Tem Phil Berger for their support. He also

"I applaud the North Carolina General Assembly's passage of the new state law that permits students to use the Cherokee language to satisfy a 'foreign' language requirement for institutions of the UNC system."

- Principal Chief Michell Hicks

thanked bill sponsors Senators Davis and Brock.

"For many years now, we, in the Eastern Band, have been pursuing renewal of the Cherokee language in our schools on the Qualla Boundary and in colleges and universities in the western region," Chief Hicks related. "We have a school in Cherokee in which our children, beginning in pre-school, can become totally immersed in learning our language and we have year-round programs on the Boundary in which children and adults can again become fluent in Cherokee. We are equally proud of programs, which we actively support, such as those at Western Carolina University where teachers of Cherokee are being educated."

The University of North Carolina system includes the following: Appalachian State University, East Carolina University, Elizabeth City State University, Fayetteville State University, N.C. Agricultural and Technical State University, North Carolina Central University, N.C. State University, UNC - Asheville, UNC - Chapel Hill, UNC - Charlotte, UNC - Greensboro, UNC - Pembroke, UNC - Wilmington, UNC School of the Arts, Western Carolina University, and Winston -Salem State University.

"Cherokee language is not a foreign language," said Dr. Hartwell Francis, Cherokee Language Program director at Western Carolina University. "The wording of the bill is unfortunate, but not unexpected. Most UNC System programs are changing to become 'modern language' programs or 'global language' programs. But still, because of the importance of English in the mainstream culture and in global commerce, from the mainstream perspective, all other languages are considered 'foreign'."

Dr. Francis related that WCU accepts Cherokee language for study at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. "Cherokee language is an important World Cultures credit for Liberal Arts Studies here at Western Carolina University. We enrolled about 60 students for our first semester Cherokee language course."

He said that WCU currently provides Cherokee language courses to UNC - Chapel Hill students. "With the passage of NC Senate Bill 444, Western Carolina University will become the key provider of Cherokee language education to the UNC System."

Chief Hicks concluded by saying, "It is a proud day when North Carolina again leads the way in helping strengthen our collective cultural heritage in this important way."

Miss Cherokee report for June and July

By KARYL FRANKIEWICZ
MISS CHEROKEE 2012

Shi-yo! The time is here, and the applications are out. Do you have what it takes to represent the Eastern Band of the Cherokee Indians? With two months left, it's hard to believe I will hand down my reign to the next wonderful lady that will have the experience and the chance to meet all the wonderful people that I have had during this time.

During the months of June and July, I had the privilege to meet some amazing people. I attended the send-off ceremony for the Remember the Removal Riders at the Kituwah mound on June 1. I also got the blessing to be the guest speaker at the Age Link graduation on June 4. On June 8, I traveled to Murphy to do a blessing for the Cherokee Valley River Cherokee Festival. Later that day, I took part in the Cherokee Voices festival at the Museum of the Cherokee Indian. On June 14, I had the blessing to host Junior Miss Lumbee Cici and her mother, Crystal Fedor, to the Outdoor Drama Theater, Museum of the Cherokee Indian, and the Oconaluftee Indian Village before we got ready for the 38th annual Eastern Band of Cherokee Pow Wow. During the pow wow, held June 14-16, I took part in the grand entries and the intertribal dances with other dancers and royalty including Junior Miss Cherokee Aliyah Bigmeat and Teen Miss Cherokee Bradley Welch. On June 22, I traveled to Robbinsville to take part in the Trail of Tears Memorial Walk. On June 28, we went back to the Kituwah mound for the Annual Kituwah Celebration where I got to meet the Little Miss Ambassador Maysi Fields, of the Cherokee Nation, and danced with the Warriors of Anikuwah.

On July 2, I traveled back to Lumberton to attend the Little Miss Lumbee and Junior Miss Lumbee pageants to see Cici Fedor and Lilly Locklear as they handed down their titles and crowns to the new ambassadors. On July 4, even on a rainy day, I watched the runners as they came in during the Sunset 5K here in Cherokee. From July 11-12, I traveled to Choctaw, Miss. to attend the 64th annual Choctaw Indian Fair. There, I got to do the Stealing Partner Dance, have a live interview, see the crowning of the new Miss Choctaw, and meet Chief Phyllis J. Anderson and Josh Turner. On July 13, I came back to be a part of the Festival of Native Peoples where I danced with not only the Warriors but various visiting tribes that attended this event as well with Little Miss Marcela, Junior Miss Aliyah, and Teen Miss Bradley.

Thank you Age Link for letting me speak at the graduation for the upcoming kindergarten children. Thank you Cherokee County for inviting me to the festival that will enable everyone to learn about our heritage. Barbara Duncan, thank you for inviting me to dance with the warriors at the Cherokee Voices festival. Thank you Cici and Crystal for coming up to attend the Pow Wow and for inviting me back to your own pageant. Thank you Punkin Jackson for inviting me down to Robbinsville for the Trail of Tears walk. Thank you Chief Phyllis and the Mississippi Band of the Choctaw Indians for inviting me to the Choctaw Indian Fair. Lastly, but certainly not least, thank you royalty board for letting me take part in all these events and giving me the support to carry on as my reign is coming to a close. Sgi.

Purdue Prof: Diet drinks contribute to weight gain

By SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

For years, diet sodas have been touted as a way to enjoy soft drinks without the guilt. A Purdue professor is alleging that those claims are incorrect.

"Although it seems like common sense that diet sodas would not be problematic, that doesn't appear to be the case," said Susan E. Swithers, a professor of psychological sciences at Purdue University. "Findings from a variety of studies show that routine consumption of diet sodas, even one per day, can be connected to higher likelihood of heart disease, stroke, diabetes, metabolic syndrome and high blood pressure, in addition to contributing to weight gain."

Her findings were published as an opinion piece on the Wednesday, July 10 issue of Trends in Endocrinology & Metabolism.

"The concern that these non-caloric sweeteners might not be healthy is a message that many people do not want to hear, especially as the prevalence of artificial sweeteners increases in other products," said Swithers.

One group that doesn't want to hear her findings is the American Beverage Association who wrote in a blog post on July 10, "First, low-calorie sweeteners are safe. They are some of the most studied and reviewed ingredients in the food supply today, and their safety is supported by regulatory agencies throughout the world, such as the European Food Safety Authority and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, as well as some of the world's leading toxicologists."

"Second, low-calorie sweeteners can be beneficial in weight loss and weight management, a position supported by leading health groups, including the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics and the American Diabetes Association."

For her article, Swithers looked at various studies including the San Antonio Heart Study, the Nurses' Health Study, and the Health Professional Follow-up Study.

Information from Purdue states, "Some data (in the studies) indicated that those who consumed artificially sweetened beverages had double the risk of metabolic syndrome compared to non-consumers."

Sheena Kanott, Cherokee Choices program manager, commented, "Soft drink companies spend billions on marketing soda each year in this country...what you never hear is the dangers that adults and children are exposed to by the increase in consumption of soft drinks."

"Regular sodas are loaded with tons of calories. Diet sodas are calorie-free yet are loaded with tons of sodium. Neither provide any nutritional value such as essential vitamins and minerals your body needs to function properly."

Kanott added, "There is strong evidence that shows a huge correlation between soda consumption and obesity. This is why it is so important that we educate others on these concepts so that our children, families, and community try to make the best choices to stay healthy."

REI supports Smokies Trails Forever Program

Friends of the Smokies, and any hiker who has hiked the Forney Ridge trail by Clingmans Dome to spectacular mountain ridge views, are thankful to Trails Forever volunteers and the support the Smokies Trails Forever program receives from Recreational Equipment Inc. (REI). REI has donated $5,000 to support the Trails Forever crew and many dedicated volunteers to improve well-loved trails in Great Smoky Mountains National Park (GSMNP).

The Smokies Trails Forever program, in its fifth year of operation, continues needed trail improvements in GSMNP with highly trained trail building staff and a high rate of returning volunteers. Volunteers work one on one with experienced trail building staff to re-construct trails using sustainable materials in order to preserve the trail and protect the resources around the trail corridor.

Over the past few years, REI has funded trail reconstruction along Forney Ridge and Chimney Tops Trails, as well as a Trails Forever equipment trailer, facilitating tool and equipment storage helping each workday run more smoothly. REI continues to support GSMNP also by promoting volunteer opportunities with the Smokies Trails Forever program and other opportunities to learn about and assist GSMNP.

Smokies Trails Forever volunteers include people who have donated their time and skills with trail work in previous years, who volunteer with the Park in other ways, and still others who are volunteering in the Smokies for the first time. Some families spend their week vacation volunteering with the Trails Forever crew. Last year, volunteers worked alongside the highly skilled crew for more than 6,000 hours.

The course "will examine the evolution of formal education among the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians from the pre-missionary period, through the missionary period of education (1800-1839) and into the modern era," according to Dr. Allen Bryant, creator and professor of the course.

The course will be offered during 3rd block on the CHS campus through a mix of face-to-face instruction, online applications, guest speakers, and field trips. Students enrolled in the course will be considered Appalachian State University students and will receive three credit hours upon successful completion of the course.

American Cancer Society needs volunteers

The American Cancer Society is looking for volunteers for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians (EBCI) to help these community members participate in lifesaving screening tests. The Society trains volunteer Community Health Advisors (CHA) on the basics of cancer and cancer screening. It provides information on community resources to help get men and women get screened for the disease. According to the NC Central Cancer Registry, Cherokee residents are diagnosed with cancer at a higher rate and dying at a higher rate than their counterparts.

"Volunteers help the American Cancer Society save lives," said Nancy Long, manager of the Community Health Advisor Program for the EBCI. "Community Health Advisors spread positive health messages in their communities and truly multiply the impact that the Society can have as an organization."

The American Cancer Society expects that the CHA program will help eliminate the high number on new cases and deaths from cancer in communities that are at higher risk for breast, cervical and colon cancers.

Upcoming trainings will be held on Aug. 3 and 10. Info: Nancy Long or Harold Long 554-5682 or nancy.long@cancer.org.

WCU awarded $1 million federal grant to increase diversity of nursing students

CULLOWHEE – The Western Carolina University School of Nursing is the recipient of a $1 million federal workforce diversity grant designed to increase the number of students from underserved rural populations who enter the nursing profession, including members of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians.

The Health Resources and Services Administration of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is awarding approximately $345,000 a year over a three-year period to WCU to create the Western North Carolina Nursing Career Network Project. The effort begins this academic year and continues until 2016.

The WNCNCN Project will enable WCU nursing faculty members to partner with community nursing professionals and nursing educators to serve as mentors to ethnically diverse and disadvantaged students from Andrews, Cherokee, Murphy, Robbinsville, Smoky Mountain and Swain high schools who are interested in nursing as a career.

The program also will provide significant scholarships and monthly stipends to qualifying graduates from those high schools and will give them the additional mentoring and support they need to achieve their goals of being nurses, said Judy Neubrander, director of WCU's School of Nursing.

“For me, this is a dream fulfilled - a way to meet the needs of our health care community by increasing the diversity within our School of Nursing and subsequently increasing the diversity of our practicing nurse population,” said Neubrander. “We have tried several ways to increase our student diversity, but have had little success. I believe this new endeavor will help enhance diversity and strengthen our existing relationships with the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians.”

The WNCNCN Project addresses the barriers of students of ethnic diversity and disadvantaged backgrounds initially at the high-school level through an innovative program designed to excite students in math and science using the Second Life “virtual campus” platform and to provide them with specialized standardized test preparation.

The grant also takes advantage of existing programs including MedCat, a medical career counseling and technologies program that works to recruit high school students interested in medical careers and related technologies. MedCat is a component of the Culturally Based Native Health Program, an ongoing partnership among WCU, Wake Forest University and the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians to promote Native American health initiatives. Lisa Lefler directs the CBNHP at WCU, with Roseanna Belt serving as elder-in-residence.

In addition, the grant will enable students at Southwestern Community College to participate in the new program through the Regionally Increasing Baccalaureate Nurses (RIBN) Program, a partnership that provides a four-year, seamless associate-to-baccalaureate nursing education.

WCU's School of Nursing is one of only 12 recipients nationwide of the highly competitive federal grant, said Douglas Keskula, dean of the WCU College of Health and Human Sciences.

“This will be an exciting project for the university and for the region we serve,” Keskula said. “It will provide a wonderful opportunity for the School of Nursing, the College of Health and Human Sciences and WCU to help fulfill the health care educational needs of our state and region.”

Coulter Regional Leadership Program accepting Applications

The new Coulter Regional Leadership Program, with the support of the Cherokee Preservation Foundation, will begin a pilot program in October 2013. This program will give people in the region new opportunities to learn and work together across cultures, governments, systems and counties to identify, understand and address region-wide challenges and opportunities. The Program will bring together adults from Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Haywood, Jackson, Macon and Swain Counties and the Qualla Boundary to learn about leadership and practice leadership through group projects to benefit the region.

Applications to participate in the pilot year program will be accepted until Aug. 15. Participants will be chosen by Sept. 1.

Planning for the program began with listening sessions in the fall of 2012. More than 100 people in six counties and the Qualla Boundary participated and discussed the needs for leadership and effective approaches to leadership learning. Four themes emerged as desired key elements for the Coulter Program. These include expanding individual leadership competencies, including public speaking project management skills, developing hands-on experiential learning and group service projects, creating opportunities for mentoring, and adopting a regional approach to solve problems and take advantage of opportunities.

Named for Dr. Myron Coulter, the Program honors Dr. Coulter's lifelong work in leadership and his interest in the western North Carolina region. Chancellor at Western Carolina University for a decade, Dr. Coulter was a founding member of the Board of Directors of the Cherokee Preservation Foundation and was an active and effective leader in the region.

The Coulter Program builds on recent leadership initiatives of the Cherokee Preservation Foundation. Since 2005, the Foundation has established the Costa Rica Cultural Exchange Program, the Jones-Bowman Leadership Award Program, the Cherokee Youth Council and youth councils in the seven far west counties, and the Right Path Program for EBCI tribal members.

CYC holding fundraiser

The Cherokee Youth Center is having a raffle to help finance their youth trip for the summer program. There are six (6) items in this raffle, so your odds of winning an item are higher as opposed to just having a single item. An up and coming artist, Steven Paul Judd (Kiowa/Choctaw), donated three (3) signed prints to the CYC to help with their fundraising endeavors. Judd is known primarily as a filmmaker. However, he is also a prolific visual artist whose mash-ups of Native experiences and disposable American pop culture are sly and often downright funny. His creations include paintings, prints, poster art, photography, and t-shirt designs. His work has been featured in public and private collections across the country, and more of his work is available on www.etsy.com/shop/TheArtofStevenJudd. The other three (3) raffle items are a Pendleton baby blanket, a ceramic wedding vase with $50 (cash), and a Kindle (2010) Wireless Reading Device: Wi-Fi: 6" display screen. The drawing will be on Monday, July 29. To purchase a ticket, see any youth member of the summer program, or stop by the Cherokee Youth Center on Acquoni Road, 497-3119.

A good habit

Dear Dr. Per Cap: I can't save money! No matter how much I think about it and really want to do it, I just can't seem to put anything aside out of my paycheck. What's up with that?

*Signed,
Buffalo Nickel*

Dear Buffalo Nickel:

Living paycheck to paycheck and not saving a dime is a habit – a bad one! You need to replace it with a good one.

How about the habit of paying yourself first?

On your paycheck stub, there are always deductions made before you get your “net” pay or take-home pay. They are things like federal and state taxes, insurance premiums, charity donations you chose to make through your company's payroll deduction, and perhaps other things. All of these items are getting “paid first” before you ever collect your take-home pay.

So make yourself first, too, by way of setting aside money for YOUR savings.

You can do that in a few ways, or use a combination of them.

- If you signed up for direct deposit into your checking account, you can probably arrange with your bank to automatically divert a portion of it into a savings account each time a paycheck deposit is made. You can choose the amount, and the bank will help you set up a savings account if you don't already have one.
- If your company has a retirement plan, sign up to funnel some of your pay into that plan each paycheck.

These are usually invested for you in some way so your money may even grow over time. At some companies, your funds might be matched at a certain level with “free money” provided by your employer. Take advantage of that. It truly is free and should not be left on the table.

- If neither of those options is available, then make a conscious effort to do it yourself. If you actually cash a paper check every payday, then take some of it and put it into a savings account right away, or at least stash it in the cookie jar or mattress at home. If you have direct deposit, take the time to actually transfer a consistent amount into your savings account each and every paycheck.

The key is to just get used to doing it. By repeatedly doing this, you'll get into the habit of regularly setting aside some savings and paying yourself first. You don't have to start with a big amount. You can make it nearly painless by starting with a small amount that you won't even notice, then increase that amount as you get more used to saving money while finding other ways to save on expenses.

Finally, if you don't think you can spare even a small amount into your savings each paycheck, here's an exercise that will help you find out that you CAN spare it. For a week or even a month, carry a notepad with you and write down each and every expenditure you make and what it's for, whether it's paying the rent or buying a cup of coffee, paying on your credit card bill or plugging a parking meter. After a week or a month, look at where you are spending your money and how much of it you are spending. No doubt you'll see places where you can easily save a few bucks, or even a lot more, without much effort. Stop spending on those things you decide are unnecessary and begin putting that amount into savings each pay period. Remember: pay yourself first, and make savings a habit!

Thank you Papa!

I would like to take this time to thank my papa, who is also one of my sponsors, for allowing me to go with him to the NCAI Conference in Reno, Nev. I got to meet the President of NCAI, Jefferson Keel. He was a very nice man, and I have a lot of respect for him and what he does for Indian country. It was an amazing experience for me. I introduced myself to the NCAI panel and all of their guests. I also met different members from Alaska, New Mexico and even one from Cherokee. I also got to meet a good friend of my papas, Billy Mills. Thank you Papa for this great experience! I had an awesome time and it is something I will never forget. It was an honor for me to go and represent the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians! I am doing my best to represent my people and I have loved every minute of it!!!

Much love and respect

Center for Native American Youth

Greetings fellow Native students! In considering a focus for this week's article, I found some very disturbing statistics that made me truly appreciate being a member of the Eastern Band. Do you know how fortunate we are to be members of a tribe that has enjoyed economic success and sustainability for many decades? There are many Native American tribes that have not been so fortunate. For the Eastern Band, our home on the Qualla Boundary of beautiful Great Smoky Mountains is a fortunate advantage for tourism.

The majority of Indian Country (and especially for those in remote locations) continues to suffer from high rates of poverty and unemployment with some tribal communities experiencing unemployment rates near 70 percent, additionally, more than 23 percent of all Native Americans live in poverty. Many of the poorest counties in the United States are located on Indian reservations. Because of chronic underfunding in federal housing dollars, many Native youth live in overcrowded dilapidated homes and attend schools which rely on the federal government for funding and yet, remain in critical condition. The result is that these communities suffer high rates of alcohol and substance abuse, violent crime and significant health disparities compared to the rest of America.

Significant obstacles for many Native American youth make it even more challenging to succeed. Did you know that Native students have the highest high school dropout rates, and some of the lowest college enrollment rates in the country? The high school graduation rate for Native students in many states where reservations are located is nearly 50 percent! This unprecedented bruise on tribal societies has caused Native youth in many tribal communities to develop a sense of hopelessness. We clearly see this in the average suicide rates among Native American youth which is 3.5 times the national average with some tribal communities having rates up to 10 times the national average. But fortunately, there is an organization devoting its efforts to changing the lives and futures of Native students. The Center for Native American Youth has dedicated its mission to improving the health, safety and overall well-being of Native American youth through communication, policy development and advocacy. Founded by former US Senator Byron Dorgan, the Center is a policy program within the Aspen Institute headquartered in Washington, DC. The goal of the center is to bring greater national attention to the issues facing Native American youth, and to foster solutions, with special emphasis on youth suicide prevention.

The national website provides a great array of outlets to assist Native youth in securing internships, scholarships, and youth advocacy and involvement activities. It provides a wealth of information regarding many aspects of Native youth life. Students can sign up to receive notifications regarding many outstanding opportunities to enrich their lives and academic ventures. My email from the organization comes every Wednesday morning and has presented me several opportunities to apply for summer academic camps, scholarships, and internships that I may have missed out on otherwise. It's a clearinghouse of all things Native youth oriented. If you are a teen struggling with identity issues, health concerns, or other situations where you feel you have nowhere to turn, the organizations features many venues to get youth the counseling, help, intervention, or information you might need to help you through the challenges of teen life.

Please visit cnay.org and get involved today! And, always remember how fortunate we are to be Eastern Band and take advantage of the opportunities and advantages your membership provides. Most importantly, lend a hand to a fellow Native student; we are all Native, and therefore, we are all connected in the hope for a better tomorrow for ourselves, our families, and our tribes.
