Gov. Cooper ratifies Tribe's sport betting bill

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

The ability to place bets on sports games and off-track horse racing at the two casinos operated by the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians (EBCI) is now legal. North Carolina Governor Roy Cooper signed North Carolina Senate Bill (S.B.) 154 into law on Friday, July 26. The bill, introduced in February by State Sen. Jim Davis (R-50th District), passed in the State House 90-27 on Monday, July 15. The bill previously passed the House Senate 43-7 on April 9.

As of print time, there isn't an exact time frame for when this will be rolled out for patrons to begin placing bets, but Tribal Gaming Commission, tribal, and casino officials noted that it is currently in motion.

The bill amends G.S. 14-292.2 to include sports and horse race wagering as Class III games that may be "lawfully conducted" on EBCI tribal lands. According to the bill, sports wagering is "the placing of wagers on the outcome of professional and collegiate sports contests". The bill describes horse race wagering as "fixed odds or pari-mutual wagering on thoroughbred, harness, or other racing of horses, including simulcasting and off-track betting". Both sections include this wording, "the wager shall be deemed to occur where it is initiated and received, all of which must occur on Indian lands within the state lawfully permitted to conduct Class III gaming activities."

Principal Chief Richard G. Sneed commented, "It demonstrates the relationship that exists on a government-to-government level between the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians and the state legislature in Raleigh which also really mirrors the government-to-government relationship that we have on the federal level. If you make a comparison, it's easier to get a bill through in Raleigh than it is in D.C. Things are so polarized in D.C. right now, it's very difficult to get anything approved."

He added, "It's nice to be able to go to Raleigh, do the lobbying work, and have those face-to-face conversations with members of the House and the Senate. On this bill, we're extremely grateful to Sen. Jim Davis who sponsored our bill on the Senate side and Rep. Corbin who sponsored the bill on the House side. It also demonstrates the great working relationship we have at the local level with members of the House and the Senate in Raleigh. Once again, the Eastern Band is out front taking the lead in Indian Country."

Chief Sneed also praised the EBCI process for getting outside legislation passed. "We'll submit a resolution from the Executive side to Tribal Council with a legislative agenda of what we want to get accomplished. Then, Council approves it and I have my marching orders which is to then get the legislation filed, get a sponsor, lobby for it, and then get it passed.

It's pretty exciting."

State Rep. Kevin Corbin (R-120th District), who represents Cherokee, Graham, and Macon counties, sponsored the House Companion bill. Both he and State Rep. Joe Same Queen (D-11th District), who represents Jackson and Swain counties), voted for the bill.

"This is an exciting time for Harrah's Cherokee Casinos," casino officials said in an official statement on Tuesday, July 16 following passage of the bill in the state house. "We are encouraged by the news and thrilled to be one step closer to offering this new opportunity to our guests and sports fans."

The news wasn't pleasant to all ears in North Carolina including the North Carolina Family Policy Council which has been a long-time opponent of legalized gambling in the state. "While S.B. 154 may seem like an isolated and limited expansion of gambling in North Carolina, this bill is likely to have much more far-reaching consequences for citizens in our state and beyond," John L. Rustin, N.C. Family Policy Council president, said in a statement. "Sports gambling is particularly corruptive and addicting, and authorizing these additional forms of gambling on the Cherokee reservation will give current gamblers even more ways to gamble and it will also attract additional new gamblers to the tribal casinos."

States and federally recognized American Indian tribes received the go-ahead to operate sports betting enterprises following a 6-3 Supreme Court decision in May 2018 in the case of Murphy v. National Collegiate Athletic Association which was combined from a separate petition, NJ Thoroughbred Horsemen v. NCAA. The Supreme Court ruled that the Professional and Amateur Sports Protection Act (PASPA), also known as the Bradley Act, which placed a federal ban on sports gambling with the exception of a few states, the main one being Nevada, was unconstitutional.

According to legalsportsreport.com, eight states now have "state-regulated sports betting industries" including: Nevada, Delaware, New Jersey, Mississippi, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Arkansas.

The National Indian Gaming Association (NIGA) has supported the idea of tribes getting into the sports betting field for several years. Following the Supreme Court decision in 2018, Ernie Stevens Jr., NIGA chairman, said in a statement, "Indian Country has diverse economics that will be impacted by the federal and state legalization of sports betting, and as a significant stakeholder our gaming tribes look forward to being at the table in establishing the critical regulatory framework that will minimize the negative impacts of sports betting on tribal casinos, permitting tribes to conduct sports betting in the same manner as non-tribal operators and in line with the principles established by tribes."

Hitting the ground running: Harrah's Cherokee working on sportsbooks

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.

One business day after N.C. Governor Roy Cooper signed legislation making sports betting legal for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, Harrah's Cherokee Casinos officials released their plans to get the ball rolling on that enterprise of the Tribe.

"This is an exciting time," Brooks Robinson, Harrah's Cherokee Casinos regional senior vice president and general manager, said on Monday, July 29. "We continuously work to offer new experiences and opportunities to our customers and are confident that our new sportsbook will be an added delight for our guests and sports fans."

Gov. Cooper signed North Carolina Senate Bill 154 into law on Friday, July 26. The bill, introduced in February by State Sen. Jim Davis (R-50th District), passed in the State House 90-27 on July 15. The bill previously passed the House Senate 43-7 on April 9.

Sportsbooks are set to open at both Harrah's Cherokee Casino Resort in Cherokee and Harrah's Cherokee Valley River Casino & Hotel in Murphy and both will be known as The Book and will be open later this year.

Harrah's Cherokee Casinos officials related that development of The Book has begun at both locations. The one at Harrah's Cherokee Casino Resort will open "in a temporary location in what is currently Sound Bytes at UltraStar Multi-tainment Center", and the one at Valley River will be placed near their promotions stage.

The bill amends G.S. 14-292.2 to include sports and horse race wagering as Class III games that may be "lawfully conducted" on EBCI tribal lands. According to the bill, sports wagering is "the placing of wagers on the outcome of professional and collegiate sports contests". The bill describes horse race wagering as "fixed odds or pari-mutual wagering on thoroughbred, harness, or other racing of horses, including simulcasting and off-track betting". Both sections include this wording, "the wager shall be deemed to occur where it is initiated and received, all of which must occur on Indian lands within the state lawfully permitted to conduct Class III gaming activities."

CCS Board reviews teacher salaries in latest meeting

JONAH LOSSIAH
ONE FEATHER STAFF

The Monday, July 22 meeting of the Cherokee Central Schools (CCS) Board of Education was called to order at 4:30 p.m. with Chairperson Charlotte Saunooke; Secretary Jennifer Thompson; board members Isaac Long, Karen French-Browning, and John Crowe; Superintendent Dr. Michael Murray; Assistant Superintendent Dr. Beverly Payne; CCS Finance Director Howard Wahnetah; School Board Assistant Sunnie Clapsaddle; HR Director Heather Driver; Tribal Council Representative David Wolfe; and Tribal Council Alternate Representative Bo Crowe present. Vice Chairperson Gloria Griffin was the only absentee for the meeting.

Opening prayer was led by Jennifer Thompson and the minutes from the June 17 meeting were approved.

Then, the agenda for the current meeting was approved.

The primary topic of discussion had to do with the pay of CCS Teachers. Guests Ashford Smith and William Lowe worked with Howard Wahnetah to present a CCS financial update and pay scale presentation.

In this presentation, Wahnetah showed how CCS's teacher salaries compare to the North Carolina and national averages. According to the Wahnetah, the average salary for a CCS teacher rests at $49,796, while the state average is $53,975. There was a long discussion between Wahnetah, the board and Superintendent Murray regarding ways CCS is attempting to "keep pace with the state." Murray consistently brought forth the idea of 'selling Cherokee' to prospective teachers. He mentioned benefits such as class size and the Cherokee culture, but that they need the salaries and adjustments to be closer for the basics of the numbers.

They also discussed North Carolina's challenges in competing financially with other states as well. The presentation continued to show that the national average for teacher pay is $60,477. When compared to the rest of America, 45 states have higher average salaries than CCS.

One way CCS is trying to stay competitive with North Carolina rates is by following their lead when it comes to salary adjustments and raises for teachers. The issue with this is that the state still does not have a solidified rate. A few options are on the table, though a 3.5 percent increase for NC teachers for each of the next two years was shot down by Governor Cooper. Cooper has a proposal that would increase teacher pay 9 percent over the next two years.

The current budgeted proposal for CCS has teachers receiving a 5% raise, and teachers' assistants a 2.5 percent raise. It was also decided by the board in this meeting that first-year teachers would also receive these increases, establishing them as 'salary adjustments' instead of raises.

There will be a work session with Tribal Council to discuss the CCS budget on Wednesday, July 24 at 1 p.m.

The other guest for the meeting was Whitney Reed, who was brought in to clarify aspects of the 10-year pension that has been implemented. What needed clearing up was who exactly was to be under the 10-year structure, and who was still under the 5-year structure. Reed said that anybody hired after Jan. 1, 2019, would be under the new 10-year system unless they were previously employed by CCS. All those hired before that date, at any point, would be under the old system.

After hearing out its guests, the board moved to review the consent agenda. Three of the 21 scheduled resolutions were pulled, two by request of the administration and one for further discussion.

The board approved the remaining resolutions and went into a closed session to discuss personnel and current state of CCS expansion project.

After the closed session, the board voted on resolution 20-009, the item that was pulled for discussion. It was passed 4-1, with John Crowe voting against it. It approved Curtis Betz to fill the Full-Time Security Monitor position pending background checks and testing. The board then moved into new business, starting with reviewing the 2019-20 CCS Handbooks. These were approved.

Next, the board reviewed and passed updates to the following job descriptions: Online Education & Career Development Facilitator, Custodial Crew Leader, High School Nurse.

The last piece of business in open session was to approve another SPED teacher. It was a position of need that did not get filled in time to be a resolution. It was passed 3-1, with John Crowe voting against and Karen French-Browning abstaining.

After this, Charlotte Saunooke called another closed session, this time excusing all but the voting members of the board.

The next CCS Board meeting will take place Monday, Aug. 5 at 4:30.

Saunooke drops out of School Board race

Cherokee School Board Chairperson Charlotte Saunooke announced on Monday, July 22 that she is dropping out of the Painttown School Board race. She related that she has notified the EBCI Board of Elections of her decision.

"Due to unexpected health issues, it has become necessary for me to withdraw my name as a candidate for Painttown School Board in the upcoming general election," she said in a statement to the One Feather. "This decision has been a huge personal struggle and not made lightly. I truly believe our children deserve to be served without distraction, and I am not confident that I can do that at this time."

Regina Rosario will run unopposed now in the upcoming general election for Painttown School Board on Thursday, Sept. 5.

Mariah Bahe making mark with Puma commercial

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

It's hard to turn on the television without seeing at least one commercial involving a sports figure with athletes endorsing everything from actual sporting equipment to food. Usually, those commercials feature the top professional athletes, but a young lady from Chinle, Ariz. is breaking through that wall and bringing Indian Country with her.

Mariah Bahe, a member of the Navajo Nation with Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians heritage, is a top-ranked junior boxer. Last December, she placed second in the Junior Girls 95lb division at the USA Boxing Elite and Youth National Championships.

Earlier this month, she spent several days in Warsaw, Poland shooting a commercial and doing a photo shoot for Puma. "I think it's a really great opportunity to show that anyone from anywhere can achieve big things," she said. "And, for my tribes, it shows that we are capable of holding these high standards and big dreams for ourselves."

The commercial is set to air in November.

Bahe expressed her happiness at representing Native youth in a project of this magnitude. "I think that I, as a Native American, hold a high bar on native athletes and that I'm an inspiration towards them."

Athletic endorsements are not only big business for the companies, but they are a huge part of many athlete's salaries. According to Business Insider, many top professional athletes make more in endorsements than they get paid for playing their actual sport. They report that LeBron James made $33.5 million last year in salary and $52 million in endorsements. Tennis superstar Roger Federer made 84 percent of his income from endorsements ($12.2 million in winnings and $65 million in endorsements).

Sometimes, athletes will endorse products that seem very out of their league – pun intended. Do you remember the 1998 AMF Bowling commercial starring his airness Michael Jordan where kids could "learn to bowl with Michael"? But, when Jordan ends a commercial with "AMF, always means fun", how can you not just love it?

I am hopeful that we will begin to see more and more Native athletes featured on commercials and receiving endorsements. Right now, there aren't that many high tier Natives athletes but those numbers are growing, and there are some including: Sam Bradford (Cherokee Nation), Heisman Trophy winner who has played quarterback for several NFL teams; Chris Wondolowski (Kiowa Tribe of Oklahoma), Major League Soccer's all-time goal scorer; Kyrie Irving (Standing Rock Sioux), NBA star who recently received his Lakota name in a ceremony on the Standing Rock Sioux Indian Reservation in North Dakota; and several others.

Bahe's goal is to box in the Olympic Games; something she works on every day. She told the One Feather that she hopes to box in the 2024 Paris Games "to show every girl out there that anything is possible".

With this commercial, she is well on her way to showing Native youth across the world that anything is possible. You just have to work hard, have a dream, and not be afraid to tackle the obstacles as they come – and having an endorsement deal or two doesn't hurt either.

“Even as We Breathe”

EBCI member realizes dream of being a published author

JONAH LOSSIAH
ONE FEATHER STAFF

Annette Saunooke Clapsaddle sat alone in the bleachers. She stared at her phone screen, squeaking basketball shoes acting as white noise in the background. She was there for her son’s ball game, but she had to make sure she wasn’t dreaming. She had received an email that had stunned her in the best way possible.

“I hope you can forgive my delay in responding to your submission. I wanted to make sure I had something firm to offer you before I was in touch. And I do! We would like to offer you a contract on ‘Even as We Breathe’.”

“Even as We Breathe” was her second novel, but her first contract offer. She was about to be a published author. The confirmation of years of hard work was just one reply away. It’s a simple thing to some people and a pipedream for others. It meant everything in the world to Clapsaddle.

“This has been a lifelong dream. It was a little surreal. I tried to check myself a little bit because I’d been disappointed before,” said Clapsaddle, a member of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians.

It was a long road to get to where she is now. She started her first novel, titled “Going to Water”, while she was in college at Yale University. She continued to work on it for years, through her first tribal job back from college and into her first stint as an English teacher at Swain County High School.

The book was loosely based on her grandfather, Chief Osley Saunooke. The novel was a finalist for the PEN/Bellwether Award for socially engaged fiction. This work carried a lot of momentum and looked like it had a chance of being published.

It didn't, and it was a significant blow to her confidence as a writer. She was frustrated by the publishing process and wanted to move on. Clapsaddle didn't give up on writing, though. What she did was listen to the people closest to her. Though she was a teacher for several years, she never stopped being a student.

That's why it was so fitting that she landed in the classroom at the Thomas Wolfe Memorial House in Asheville. The class was taught by Heather Newton, and it was called "Gettin' Her Done". It was created to help aspiring authors get started with their books.

Newton quickly realized Clapsaddle's talent and was surprised she was taking the class at all, considering she was a finalist for the PEN/Bellwether.

"I remember my first conversation with her was basically, 'you know girl, you could be teaching this class,'" said Newton with a chuckle.

Newton's class gave Clapsaddle the confidence and base that she needed to move forward with a second book. Another significant shift for her at this time was that she went back to teaching.

Clapsaddle had worked as the executive director of the Cherokee Preservation Foundation for the previous two and a half years and decided to step down in July 2015 to return to Swain High School.

Annette Saunooke Clapsaddle

She says that it wasn't an easy decision, but that teaching is her calling.

"I didn't even realize how important teaching was to my writing," said Clapsaddle.

"With teaching, I have material that I need to convey to other people, and I have to distill that down the way that connects with people. I think that constant practice helps me as a writer."

Though Clapsaddle says she had even less time to write when she returned as a teacher, she was in a much better headspace to work on a book. Her students kept her thinking, and she was also working with other writers that she respected.

As she regained her footing for writing, Clapsaddle was more efficient than ever.

Many Thursdays in the summer

you can find her at the family cabin. A gorgeous house perched on an outlook of Kituwah. It is a place of peace for Clapsaddle.

"I love the fact that I can look over Kituwah and always be reminded and centered in that way," said Clapsaddle, peering out at the valley.

"When I need to refocus, I can come out here and refocus by seeing Kituwah and knowing nothing's more important than that."

Her father found the property years ago, and together they went to work on what is now the cabin. Almost hidden from the rest of the area, a small road hugging a mountainside leads to her sanctuary.

This place allows Clapsaddle to feel closer to her home. This is important for a lot of reasons, but especially for her writing. Her mission is to show real Cherokee culture. She wants to capture the sense of humor of Cherokee people, and the authentic aspects that make people Cherokee.

Her new book looks to battle stereotypes of her culture, and to use individual stories to paint a bigger picture.

"It is set during World War II at the Grove Park Inn in Asheville when they held access diplomats and foreign nationals as prisoners of war. It was for a very short period of time there. My main character is from Cherokee, Cowney is his name. He's a young man, about 19, who leaves Cherokee to go work there that summer," said Clapsaddle.

"While he is there, he is accused of being involved in the disappearance of a diplomat's young daughter. So, the novel itself is set partly in Cherokee and partly in Asheville. It's dealing with two major themes.

One is familial identity – Cowney will grapple with some of his family relationships. And it's also dealing with the complexity of race relations."

Someone who understands Clapsaddle's drive and goal is her new editor, accomplished novelist Silas House. The two first met when House was visiting Swain County High School for an event.

"I was just immediately impressed by the way she talked about literature and the way she interacted with her students. And several writers that I know had read her work and really bragged on her and said that she was the real deal," said House.

He said that when the University of Kentucky Press offered him the editor position for Clapsaddle's book, he had no choice but to accept.

"It's just a voice that American literature is in dire need of. To my knowledge, a major press has never published a novel by an Eastern Band Cherokee. And that's just mind-boggling that in 2019, we are still lacking that voice. I just think that she writes about a culture that so many people misunderstand. But first and foremost, she's just telling a human story."

Getting the news changed Clapsaddle's life. But because of who she is, she didn't celebrate alone. When she received the email that day before her son's basketball game, she had to step out of the gym to call the people she loved.

She talked to her husband and her father. And she also had a meaningful conversation with Dawn Gilchrist, who was a Department Chair at Swain when Clapsaddle was first hired.

American Legion Auxiliary – What is the Auxiliary?

MARY WACHACHA

STEVE YOUNGDEER AMERICAN LEGION POST 143 AUXILIARY

The Eastern Band of Cherokees is a Tribe whose members have a strong sense of fighting for freedom. We are lucky to have so many veterans!

Although there are many small towns in western North Carolina who have veterans, few of those small towns have organized an American Legion Post. In the late 1930s, the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians formed the Steve Youngdeer American Legion Post 143. The Steve Youngdeer American Legion Post is also home to the American Legion Auxiliary. The American Legion Auxiliary is the world's largest women's patriotic service organization, with the strength and influence of the American Legion Auxiliary being derived from its members. The American Legion Auxiliary, located in the American Legion Building on Acquoni Road, exists to provide services to the current military and veterans of the Eastern Band.

Our president is Patsy Ledford, Carol Long is our vice president, Lisa Penick is our secretary, and Sharon French is our treasurer.

Our mission is, "In the spirit of Service, Not Self, the mission of the American Legion Auxiliary is to support The American Legion and to honor the sacrifice of those who serve by enhancing the lives of our veterans, military, and their families, both at home and abroad. For God and Country, we advocate for veterans, educate our citizens, mentor youth, and promote patriotism, good citizenship, peace and security."

We hope to encourage greater participation in the Auxiliary by encouraging those women, who are eligible for membership in The American Legion, to consider joining the American Legion Auxiliary. If you are the mother, wife, daughter, sister, grand-daughter, great-grand-daughter, or grandmother of veterans or you have loved ones who are members of our local American Legion Post, we would like to invite you to join us for our monthly meetings on the third Monday of every month at the American Legion Post on Acquoni Road from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

For each meeting, for each service activity to our veterans, for each of our currently members in the military, the Auxiliary finds we need more women to help us to help our military and our veterans. As we work to ensure the future growth and prosperity of the Auxiliary – we need your help. Please consider joining us at our next meeting on Monday, Aug. 19 at the American Legion Post (Old Civic Center/Court House) on Acquoni Road at 6 p.m.

"She, more than anybody, was invested in the story. So, I couldn't even talk. I just cried when I talked to her," said Clapsaddle.

Gilchrist has had a significant impact on Clapsaddle's life. She was a mentor and a true friend to Clapsaddle.

"There are only a few moments in my life where I have experienced pure joy, but that was one. The pure joy was coming from her, but I certainly felt it for her and with her,"

said Gilchrist.

There were still logistics involved after accepting the offer from the University of Kentucky Press. But eventually, it was time to sign the contract. Clapsaddle was still in disbelief, so she wanted to make it a special event for herself. She headed to Fire Mountain.

Mountain biking has become an essential hobby for Clapsaddle, of late. It works to clear her, it allows her to think about her writing, and it brings a stronger connection between her and the mountains she calls home.

"One of the major parts of the book revolves around a waterfall," explained Clapsaddle.

"I took the contract and a backpack with me and rode my bike up Fire Mountain to one of the waterfalls there. I signed the contract in front of the waterfall there. I'm weird, maybe, but it was important to me to be by a waterfall and to be in Cherokee when I did it."

It was done, almost. Two crucial things needed to be done.

The first was dinner. Clapsaddle rode back down the mountain and headed home, picking up Mexican food and champagne.

The contract also needed a final signature. Her husband, Evan, signed the witness copy of the contract and it was official. That night Clapsaddle and her family toasted the next step in her life.

Clapsaddle's work is far from finished, but she says that she is so proud and happy to be where she is. The book, "Even as We Breathe", is expected in the summer of 2020. Edits will be made, timelines crunched, and there are plenty more writing sessions up at the cabin.

Dr. Murray named Western Region Superintendent of the Year

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

After only two years at the helm as superintendent of Cherokee Central Schools (CCS), Dr. Michael Murray has garnered a prestigious award. He was recently named the Western Region Superintendent of the Year and is in the running for the state award, known as the A. Craig Phillips North Carolina Superintendent of the Year Award. That award is co-sponsored by the following organizations: N.C. Association of School Administrators (NCA-SA), N.C. School Superintendents' Association (NCSSA), and the N.C. School Boards Association (NCSBA).

In his 35th year as an educator, Dr. Murray has been nominated before, but this is his first win – a win he credits to the faculty and students at Cherokee Central Schools. “This school system not only deserves all of the credit, I am just blessed to be the one selected to lead it for the last couple of years. I’m very honored to be selected for our region.”

The Western Region represents 13 counties in western North

Craig Phillips North Carolina Superintendent of the Year Award which will be awarded in November. He is shown at Ray Kinsland Stadium on the afternoon of Thursday, July 25.

Carolina – “from Hendersonville to Murphy” as Dr. Murray put it.

He said he’s happy to have won the regional award and noted that while his name is on the award, it truly represents the work being done at Cherokee Central Schools these days. “To me, it validates that in our region, and possibly in our entire state, that we’re part of something special.”

Dr. Murray said that the students are the focus of Cherokee Central Schools and that is a reason for the recognition. “The bottom line is we should all focus on the kids and then support each other to get them what they need.”

He said this is also a win for mountain schools all throughout the far western part of North Carolina. “Ultimately, none of the far west has ever gotten the credit they deserve. I think it’s important for our region to not only be acknowledged by the state, but, our region has led in test scores for years. Our mountain students are the smartest students in the state. We have high expectations and they live up to them.”

Dr. Murray said that academics are the focus at CCS, but athletics, performing arts, cultural programs, and more help students to receive a well-rounded education. “I’m excited about every way that a student can connect with Cherokee Central Schools, but the most driving force should always be how are they doing in those classrooms? Are they making the achievement levels they need to, and if they’re not, why not?”

He added, “I’m excited about the future. I am enjoying every moment of the ride.”

The N.C. Superintendent of the Year award will be announced during the NCSBA Conference in Greensboro on Nov. 13.

Sequoyah Birthplace Museum to observe Sequoyah Remembrance Day

VONORE, Tenn. - The Sequoyah Birthplace Museum in Vonore will observe Sequoyah Remembrance Day Sunday, Aug. 4 from 12:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. with free admission to the Museum. Sequoyah died in August of 1843. It is not known what day he died, so the Museum related it has chosen the first Sunday in August to remember Sequoyah and his life. Participating in this celebration is the Warriors of Anikituhwa who are the Eastern Band of the Cherokee Indians official ambassadors, and the Cherokee Fiends who are cultural ambassadors for the Museum of the Cherokee Indian. Learn about Cherokees in the Civil War and corn husk doll making demonstrations.

"This is a day to remember the man who gave the Cherokee people their own written language," said Charlie Rhodarmer, Sequoyah Birthplace Museum manager/director. "In 5,000 years of human civilization, Sequoyah is the only person, not literate in any language, who created a written language for his people."

Sequoyah was born circa 1776 in the village of Tuskegee, near modern day Vonore. He spent most of his life in the Overhill Cherokee area, where he began creating a Cherokee writing system.

After 12 years of work, Sequoyah finished the Syllabary in 1821 while living in Willstown, Ala. The Cherokee Nation adopted the Syllabary and within two years most of the Cherokee people had become literate in their own language. After living a brief time in Arkansas, Sequoyah moved to the Indian Territory, known today as Oklahoma.

In 1842, Sequoyah volunteered to go with other Cherokees to find a group of Cherokees that had left the Overhill area during the American Revolution and had headed toward Texas or Mexico. Sequoyah died on this trip in August 1843. There are several stories about how Sequoyah died, and it is not known where he is buried.

"We invite people to visit the museum on Sunday and learn more about Sequoyah's fascinating life and experience modern Cherokee culture," said Rhodarmer. The Museum is located on Highway 360 in Vonore, about one mile from the Highway 411 intersection. Info: (423) 884-6246

How much Oklahoma?

Governor demands a record share of tribal casino revenues

By Kolby Kicking Woman

Thousands of jobs, casino operations, could be at risk from fees that would among the highest in the country

Oklahoma Governor Kevin Stitt expressed his desire to raise the fees charged to tribal casinos in the state demanding a share that would be among the highest in the nation. Tribes say that puts thousands of jobs and casino operations at risk.

The question deserves to be asked, if tribal casinos were Amazon or Microsoft, would they be courted or taxed heavily? The former was offered more than $2 billion in tax incentives from the state of New York when they were deciding whether to build their new headquarters there.

Back in 2004, residents of Oklahoma overwhelming passed State Question 712, otherwise known as the State-Tribal Gaming Act, by more than 270,000 votes which established laws for the state to enter into gaming compacts with the federally-recognized tribes.

As part of the compacts, tribes pay an "exclusivity fee" ranging between 4 percent and 10 percent of a casino's net revenue and in the fiscal year 2018, the state of Oklahoma collected nearly $139 million from such fees. The amount the state received was a record for the fourth consecutive year.

Since the act's inception, tribes of Oklahoma have paid more than $1.5 billion in exclusivity fees and that money has been distributed between the Education Reform Revolving Fund, the General Revenue Fund and the Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services.

In addition to those fees, the Oklahoma Indian Gaming Association reports that tribal gaming contributes $7.2 billion to the state economy, and gaming employees paid out almost $325 million in payroll-related taxes, including $33 million in income taxes to the State of Oklahoma.

That's not enough for this governor.

Despite the success over the past 15 years, tribal leaders and Stitt, a Cherokee citizen, are at odds over what happens next when the original compacts expire at the end of the year.

Tribal leaders say the compacts will renew for another 15-year period whereas Gov. Stitt says the compact will terminate. He wants to renegotiate the compacts and raise the exclusivity fees to a range of 20 percent to 25 percent. Stitt wrote in an op-ed earlier this month that he derived that number to match most other compacts in the country.

But there is little evidence to back up that claim.

Fees do vary from state to state. For example, Arizona exclusivity fees range between 1 percent and 8 percent and in Minnesota, which could be considered one of the most successful tribal gaming states, the exclusivity fee is nonexistent, or zero.

In his op-ed, Stitt called Oklahoma's fees "the lowest in the nation."

At a meeting earlier this month, the Inter-Tribal Council of the Five Civilized Tribes approved a resolution and released a statement rejecting the governor's plan.

"We have considered the state of Oklahoma a trustworthy partner through the years," the statement said. "The recent action of Governor Stitt puts into question his sincerity to work with us in a cooperative manner moving ahead. We are resolute in our position, and it is our hope Governor Stitt and his advisors will not attempt any bad faith interference on the compact which could set back the progress we have achieved by working together."

The Oklahoman newspaper wrote: "The unity among the Five Tribes show they could be a force to be reckoned with should the impending expiration of the gaming compacts pit the tribes against the state. Leaders of the Five Tribes represent more than 750,000 Native American people."

However, in response to the passed resolution, Stitt released a statement of his own saying he was elected to give a "fresh eye to all agreements."

"I am committed to open discussions with all tribal partners and to achieving an outcome that spurs more funding for public education, grows opportunity for the tribes, and is a successful partnership for the state and future generations of Oklahomans," Stitt said.

Beyond the taxes, fees and additional tourism Oklahoma tribal casinos bring to the state, they also invest in infrastructure, education, health care and employ more than 55,000 people. In an American Gaming Association report, Casinos & Communities, Senior Vice President of Economic Development of the Tulsa Regional Chamber, Brien Thorstenberg said tribal gaming has improved everyone's lives.

"I think that the overall quality of life and standards of living of tribal citizens have improved, and the gaming industry has invested a lot back into the state of Oklahoma, which has improved everybody's lives," Thorstenberg said.

As the gaming industry continues to grow and Oklahoma continues to rake in hundreds of millions of dollars in exclusivity fees, critics ask, why fix what's not broken?

Sitting idly by

ROBERT JUMPER
ONE FEATHER EDITOR

You have little in personal rights under the Charter and Governing Document of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, except for the right to vote. And, even that is limited to 1) Voting for elected officials, and 2) Voting on issues as approved for you to vote on by Tribal Council. And, you get conditional protection from property reclamation.

Number two seems to be the most problematic issue in our governance. The push for getting a tribal constitution predates the current Charter of the Tribe. I don't know what the problems were "back in the day" that prevented a constitution from coming before the people. Today's issues are that current government leadership may not think the draft document will serve the people as effectively as the current Charter. There were even comments that the leaders fear, and the people should fear, the proposed constitution.

The apathetic atmosphere around constitution discussion would seem to lend credence to their thoughts. After a couple of years of meetings, educational presentations at community clubs, and work sessions with Tribal Council, few members of the community have stepped forward to support the effort.

Recently, I was able to have a quick chat with one of our tribal council representatives about apathy. This leader's take on it certainly is valid and worth consideration. This leader stated that maybe the reason tribal members weren't rallying behind the change is that they are happy and satisfied with the way things are. Perhaps we are just so comfortable that we don't want anything to rock the boat enough to have us give up our comfort and strive for more. Maybe we like being taken care of, and we are willing to give up control of our government to do so.

We speak of historical trauma and rightfully so. Indigenous peoples of North America experienced the type of genocidal actions that have been condemned around the world in modern culture.

Our tribal ancestors paid a heavy price to ensure the continuation of native peoples. But, the Indian Wars may not have been the worst of the atrocities that happened to Indians.

The invading Europeans conquered the tribes, then moved the survivors to reservations; segregation camps where civilized society could be protected from the "savage" behaviors - where assimilation training could be administered that would eliminate or subvert Indian cultures, traditions, languages, and religions. If native peoples refused to absorb and convert, then they would not be allowed to roam freely in the new civilized society of America. Sure, tribes may have their governments so long as those did not stray too far from federal government laws. The atrocities didn't end with physical mistreatment and stripping of culture. They covertly set about stripping native tribes of their dignity. By relegating tribes to reservations, usually land that would serve no or little economic value, and telling tribal peoples that if they were compliant, that they would be "taken care of", or given food, shelter, and have their medical needs attended to, they were slowly removing the pride and dignity of a tens of thousands year old people. All we needed to do is disengage, to "stand down," and we would have provision. In other words, be apathetic, and you won't have any worries.

And there it is. It is my opinion that some of us have become so accustomed as a people to being "took care of" that we forget the proud history of a free, indigenous people. I have had many people try to describe to me what it means to be Cherokee, and I get different answers from each person that educates me. I guess that there is no one answer and it is probably an amalgam of all. Foundational-ly, being Cherokee is a matter of the heart. In each one of us with Cherokee blood, there is the DNA of a proud, intelligent people and culture; a people destined to lead and not be converted. The appearance of this apathetic nature is not part of that DNA. We have learned it, and we need to unlearn it quickly.

Some parts of the assimilation process may be irreversible. It is doubtful that there will ever be a day when Cherokee will be the first language of most of our children. It would be on the level of a miracle if we put down our Big Macs, fries, and Cokes to picked up organic, homegrown foods as our primary sources of sustenance. We are too bought into their system in some areas to turn back.

Then, there are fundamental parts of our culture we may save if we choose. But, we must choose. And, if we are going to choose, we must have control. The current governing document affords the Eastern Band population very little direct control of destinies. Civil rights are not mentioned in the Charter. Things that are in the Charter, as in the taking of a census, are supposedly unchangeable without a vote of the people. The Tribal census is supposed to be a foundational necessity and right of the people. But, elected officials deemed a census as a non-essential matter for you without your input, without a referendum.

The issue is systemic, lest someone thinks I am condemning our current elected officials. We have known our law for several election cycles required the census, yet it was either ignored or put off when the time came. And, it is impossible for us, as a people, to address it, saving casting votes for or against candidates who advocate for continuing to put it off. Unfortunately, in our apathy, I am not sure we will even make it a consideration when we go to the polls. Our needs are being met, so why bother, right?

An adequately vetted and executed constitution provides a framework for the governance of the people, by the people, and for the people. It codifies the rights of the people. It frames the role of public servants and service. A constitution would help eliminate the confusing and contradictory code of laws by which we now operate. A constitution would replace the Charter, not the code of laws. Once a constitution is in place, the code of laws would be amended to conform to it.

By now, you have figured out that I am a proponent of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians establishing a constitution. That is not to say that I think the people want one. I do not proposit to speak for the people as some do. I think it would be a tragedy for future generations of our people to see that we had a significant decision before us that would affect them, but we could not get enough people interested to have a serious discussion and ultimately a choice. This is certain, a constitution for the EBCI will happen or not happen because of me and you, either through our action or inaction.

We are a great nation of people with financial resources that rival that of some large cities in America. We have a duty to our citizens, past-present-future, to be engaged. Our Tribe has gained so much. We are looking to protect the future for the next generations of tribal leaders. I hope there is a day when every citizen of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians feels that they are essential to the process of making a better Cherokee. As members of this Tribe, each of us should take ownership and responsibility for its future.

Blue Ridge Honor Flight supports, honors veterans

JONAH LOSSIAH
ONE FEATHER STAFF

On Saturday, Sept. 21, I am being honored with the opportunity to participate in the Blue Ridge Honor Flight.

For those that don't know, the Honor Flight is an event held to support and respect military veterans of this area. The trip consists of flying to Washington, D.C. out of Asheville for a full-day event. The group is made up of veterans and guardians. They tour the different memorials of D.C., pay their respects, and honor those there and ones who have fallen.

The job of the guardians, which will primarily be my role (other than that of a reporter), is to provide the veterans with whatever it is that they need. This may entail pushing of a wheelchair, conversation, or simply allowing for the presence of someone who cares.

I was presented this opportunity by Warren Dupree; a member of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians and an U.S. Army veteran. When Mr. Dupree came into our office with this offer, I immediately accepted when asked if I could go. The reason I am so excited about this trip is because of what it means to the people going. To some, this might seem a minor event. Washington D.C. isn't that far, and many forget what those memorials mean to those who have served.

Even more than that, though, it's the effort and the support of a community. Respect is a powerful thing. I wish to show that I deeply respect these men and women on this flight. Now and then you need to analyze how you can help other people. Whether they're in desperate need, or you feel like lending a favor, it's often the small things that end up having a massive impact on a life.

This trip is likely to change my perspective on certain aspects of my life. Once you enter an environment like that, you can't help but feel honored being there with them. Keeping in mind that your presence could make somebody's day.

Mr. Dupree told me how important this day was for him when he first went. Of course, I am in a much different situation, having never served in the military myself. But, I wish to align my mind with theirs for that day.

"It is such a well-organized and significant event," said Dupree. "To go on this flight and to be allowed to visit with fellow veterans who served maybe not at the same time, but in the same area, it's a spiritual cleansing. It's a profoundly emotional event and day. You're able to make peace with yourself."

Tears might be shed. Smiles and disbelief will also be in abundance, I'm sure. It will feel terrific knowing that I will not be the only EBCI member on that flight. Principal Chief Richard G. Sneed and his wife, who were both U.S. Marines, will be guardians on the trip. Dupree is expecting at least one

EBCI veteran on the flight, as well. However, Warren Dupree wishes for it to be known that there are still spaces on the September 21 flight. He is actively encouraging any veterans in the area that are interested in going to contact him directly at (828) 508-2657. The flight is free of charge for veterans, as the event has a strong fundraising effort to pay for those that have served.

"What better way to heal?" Dupree asks his fellow veterans. "Let this happen. Take the opportunity that a grateful community is giving to you, that wants you to at least visit those memorials that are dedicated to the men and women that served our country. These memorials are dedicated to them; they may not have another opportunity."

I hope this commentary has shed some light on an important day for a lot of people, and possibly encouraged a few more in joining me on this journey.

SPEAKING OF FAITH

Jesus mourns over Jerusalem

MYRA D. COLGATE

CHEROKEE PENTECOSTAL HOLINESS CHURCH

Jesus mourned:

"Jerusalem! Jerusalem! Murderer of prophets! Killer of the ones who brought you God's news! How often I've ached to embrace your children, the way a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, and you wouldn't let me. And now you're so desolate, nothing but a ghost town. What is there left to say? Only this: I'm out of here soon. The next time you see me you'll say, 'Oh, God has blessed him! He's come, bringing God's rule!'"

Matthew 23:37-39 (MSG)

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, you who kill the prophets and stone those who are sent to you! How often I have longed to gather your children together as a hen gathers her chicks under her wings, but you would have none of it!"

"Look your house is left to you desolate!"

"For I tell you, you will not see me from now until you say, 'Blessed is the one who comes in the name of the Lord!'"

Matthew 23:37-39 (NET) (GSB)

From the time when Joshua and the Israelites were beginning to conquer the land the Lord was giving them, until they began to assign the land to the tribes we see that Jerusalem was amongst what was given to the Tribe of Judah (Joshua 15: 8, 63; members of the Jebusites still lived there with them and to this very day. (NIV Study Bible. 1995 Zondervan Publishing House, 10th Anniversary Edition.) Jerusalem was eventually taken over by King David, and the Temple was built by his son, King Solomon. The listings of the kings and the years they ruled from there are listed in 1 Kings and 2 Kings. Historical happenings are also given in 1 Chronicles and 2 Chronicles along with the king/s which were involved.

Ezra and Nehemiah recount the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem and of the Temple after the Babylonian invasion and removal of many of the people. Prophecies concerning Judah and Jerusalem can be found in Psalms 51:18, 79:1; Psalms 122, 125, 128, 137, 147; Isaiah, Jeremiah, implores repentance and change, gives history and future prophecies if they will, or if they won't change their ways. Daniel also gives early accounts and even endtime prophecies. Zechariah mostly gives us prophecies concerning Israel that are still to be fulfilled. Read Zechariah 12:10 -14:21). Jesus is coming soon.

In the New Testament, read in Mark 10:33, Luke gives us brief passages of Jesus and His family going up to Jerusalem, and also figured in the devil's temptations. His prophecies concerning Jerusalem were given in 13:34, 18:31, 19:41, 21:20-24, 24:27; Galatians 4:25-26; Hebrews 12:22; in John the Revelation of Jesus, we see Jerusalem in 3:12, and through the prophecies given by John we see the Holy City of 21:2, and 21:10.

As we see so much that will take place is in what Jesus gives his disciples in His prophecies Matthew 24 concerning Jerusalem. The end-times and our necessary instructions are located for all to see in verses 24:2, 24:4-35, and in 24:36-50. Jerusalem and Israel really do contain the prophetic reasons for our times and the timing of events if we will really look into them and prayerfully examine all that has been placed there for us. Since these things involve the entire earth and its population, this really is a time to at least read up on what is known, what is expected of each person, and what is the best way through these times for you and your family members.

No one is excluded unless they themselves choose to refuse to acknowledge this as being true and have decided it is not for them. That is left for each one to decide. Even though it is freely being offered to everyone, they each must decide to make a decision and to believe enough to put what is given into their actions. Remember, the governance of the Law of Love is the most important and without having and working in love nothing works rightly now or later on.

Many scholars have acknowledged that this is the endtime generation. The time clock began when Israel became a nation again, in Israel, after being out of the Land of Israel since 70 A.D., until May 14-15, 1948. It truly became a nation in a day. Then in 1967, with the outcome of the Six Day War, Jerusalem was returned to being under Israel's administrative control. Heaven has sent one of its most famous Billboard signs with the four Blood moons appearing on four of the Jewish Feast days at the time of last eclipses. You decide.

THE ILLUSTRATED BIBLE

So the Lord gave to Israel all the land of which He had sworn to give to their fathers, and they took possession of it and dwelt in it. The Lord gave them rest all around, according to all that He had sworn to their fathers. And not a man of all their enemies stood against them; the Lord delivered all their enemies into their hand. Not a word failed of any good thing which the Lord had spoken to the house of Israel. All came to pass.

The ABC's

of submitting letters, press releases and articles to the Cherokee One Feather for publication.

A Advertisements are not articles. If you are selling something in the body of your submission, you will be asked to pay our advertising rates. Your articles should be about a public service or be at least related to community members.

B Brief is better. We want your reader to be engaged and interested in what you are saying. Our 250-word limit is not to keep you from speaking your mind. It is to ensure that you communicate in a way that will capture even the shortest of attention spans.

C Cherokee-centric is the ticket! Your material should take into account who the Cherokee One Feather audience is and be relatable for them. If you value them with your words, our community will value what you write.

The Cherokee One Feather wants to be your voice and your source for information relevant to the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians and those who are interested in our culture, history, and lifestyle. We love sharing your opinions, views, and public service information. Please submit your letters, releases, and articles to Robert Jumper, One Feather Editor, at robejump@nc-chokeee.com or bring them by our offices at the Ginger Lynn Welch Complex. To send them via snail mail, our address is PO Box 501, Cherokee, NC 28719. Happy writing!

Keeping Paws Cool in Summer Heat

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: We're now in the full grip of summer. Please remind your readers to be careful walking their dogs on the hot pavement, because it can burn the pads of their paws. — Debra L., Baltimore

DEAR DEBRA: Absolutely! Folks, even dogs that love being in the outdoors are vulnerable to injury from the hot pavement, and from heat in general. Here are a few tips for keeping pets safe during the summer:

- Take pets outside early in the morning, before it gets very hot, or after sunset.

- Before walking dogs on the sidewalk, place the back of your hand on the pavement for 7 to 10 seconds. If it's too hot to keep your hand pressed to it, it's too hot for your dog's paws. Walk on a grassy area, instead.

- If you must walk your dog on pavement (you live in the city, for example), place booties on your dog's paws to protect them.

- Make sure your pet has plenty of cool, clean water to drink, even if it spends all day indoors.

- Don't let your pet out in the backyard unless there's a shady, open-air spot for it to rest.

A blog post at Vets Now breaks down the details. Even when the air temperature is below 80 F, asphalt on the street can reach 125 F, especially on sunny days with little wind. That's hot enough to cause severe skin burns, even on dogs' seemingly tough pads. Brick and concrete pavement are only slightly cooler.

So don't leave it to chance. Take control of your pet's comfort and safety this summer by making sure they are protected from heat-related injuries.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

- It was French playwright and actor Louis Verneuil who made the following sage observation: "The prime purpose of eloquence is to keep other people from talking."

- With only two known to exist, the rarest U.S. postage stamp is an 1868 1-cent Benjamin Franklin Z-Grill, so called because of the shape that was impressed into the stamp. One of the Z-Grills is in the collection of the New York Public Library, and the other was sold in 1998 for $935,000. That's not the end of the story, though; in 2005, the same stamp was traded for a block of stamps valued at $3 million.

- The year 1828 was a sad one for winemakers. For unknown reasons, 80 percent of the bottles of Champagne bottled that year exploded.

- There is a law on the books in Maine that prohibits having your shoes untied in public. I assume that one is not much enforced.

- In 2002, in an effort to be more environmentally friendly, Ireland decided to try to reduce the use of plastic grocery bags by levying a 15-cent tax on each one. It worked, too — use of the bags dropped by 95 percent.

- Sir Christopher Wren, who designed the famous London landmark St. Paul's Cathedral, was an astronomer, not an architect. His other achievements included developing a method for calculating eclipses and devising a way to measure the rings of Saturn.

- Back in 1935, the owner of the Chicago Cubs baseball team predicted that night games were "just a fad." He wasn't much of a prognosticator, it seems.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There might be time to make a change. But be honest with yourself: Is it what you really want, or one you feel pressured into making? Your answer should determine your next move.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Change is dominant, but so is caution: Proceed carefully, checking each step along the way to avoid encountering any unwelcome surprises that might be lurking along your path.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It could be a mistake to rely on someone to keep his or her promise without checking out previous performances. What you learn now could save you from a painful lesson later.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Taking a strong stand on an issue you feel is too important to ignore could inspire others to follow suit. The weekend is a good time to socialize with old friends and make new ones.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your sensitive nature gives you an insight into the problems of someone close to you. Your offer of support could be just what this person needs to start turning his or her life around.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Financial matters continue to need even more careful analysis than usual.
Use caution with investment possibilities. A personal relationship might take an unexpected turn by the week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: You appreciate the wonders of the world and enjoy sharing your delight with others.
