Hospital improves patient care, wait times with integrated care approach

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.

The Cherokee Indian Hospital is working to improve the overall care of its patients as well as improve appointment access with its integrated health care approach.

“Patients can come to their appointment, and they’re taken care of wholly,” said April Ross, RN case manager. “The whole patient can be taken care of. They can come see a pharmacist, a behavioral health specialist, a nutritionist, their health provider, a nurse. We all take care of the patient in a team approach.”

The integrated health care approach, taken from a model of the Southcentral Foundation which provides health care for Alaska Natives, involves providers broken down into teams known as pods. “It’s an interdisciplinary team taking care of the patient’s needs, and they can get it all in one visit or they can be separated into different visits,” said Ross. “It’s a team approach to care.”

Dr. Carmen Nations, staff pediatrician, related, “Part of the team approach is that maybe not everyone who was coming in and taking appointment time needs to come in and take appointment time. If you just need to talk about your referral, if you just need to talk about your medication refill, or you just want to talk to a nutritionist, we can do that now without you sitting in the doctor’s waiting room.”

She said patient service has increased since the integrated approach has been implemented. “We’ve seen a huge decline in our no-show rates, and I think that is because they know when they come who they’re going to see and that they’ll see friendly faces, familiar faces, people who are happy to see them. People used to call and we’d say, ‘call back tomorrow,’ and that’s not the case anymore. Now, if the patient calls they should obtain an appointment really when they need it...that’s our goal – to really give patients what they need.”

Ross said one of their goals is educating patients about the program and how it can help them. “I don’t think they understand the services that we can provide. They can get all things in one visit in a day. And, I don’t think they understand that they don’t have to see a doctor each visit. They can call and talk to a nurse and see what the nurse can do for them, to determine if they can have their needs met by another provider such as a pharmacist.”

Cyndi Postell, RN case manager, said the program has been especially helpful to elders of the Tribe. “For them to be able to come in and get everything done that they need in one day and not have to arrange for transportation three or four times helps them.

They seem to like it.”

Ross said pod staff will review a patient’s chart the day before their appointment to see which services they might need during their appointment. They will make sure the proper team members, which could include pharmacists and nutritionists, meet with the patient during their visit to discuss all areas of their health.

She said the integrated health care approach has helped communication throughout the hospital staff. “It has helped us all work better together because Pharmacy understands what our issues are in our department because they are right there in there with us. They see our struggles and we see their struggles. It has just helped us become better team members.”

Ross related a story of a patient of hers that had been admitted to another facility. “They were trying to do discharge planning, and he was really adamant that they contact his nurse (me)...he told them that he has a nurse, he has a pharmacist...this approach helps build trust.”

Postell added, “I think it’s really important that they have that go-to person; that they are able to call that person and get whatever their need is that day taken care of.”

Sonya Wachacha, Director of Nursing, said the hospital is really working for excellence through the integrated care team approach, founded on the Patient Centered Medical Home structure, and related they are shooting for the Malcolm Baldrige Award, a Presidential Award given out for excellence in quality. “That’s one of the things that we’re striving for. It’s a journey for us. It’s about caring for our patients through process improvement.”

Wachacha is also excited about the new facility and what it will bring as far as process improvement. “Sometimes, people will build something and then shove their work processes into it, and so the really cool thing about our hospital is that we’re really building it around work flow. We’re building it to facilitate the flow of patients in an effort to be a Medical Home to our Cherokee community.”

She said the pod space at the new facility is made to enhance communication between team members and decrease provision of care in a siloed method.

DOI revamps tribal federal recognition rules

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

The Department of Interior (DOI) issued rules on Monday, June 29 that it hopes will curb the lengthy federal recognition petition process. Some tribes that have been recognized through the previous process have had to wait decades such as the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe of Massachusetts who had to wait 32 years before receiving federal recognition.

"This updated process for important tribal recognition makes good on a promise to clarify, expedite and honor a meaningful process for federal acknowledgment to our First Americans," Interior Secretary Sally Jewell said on Monday.

The new rules, released in a 140-page document, details what the DOI hopes will add transparency and timeliness to the petitioning process.

Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs Kevin Washburn commented, "This updated rule is the product of extraordinary input from tribal leaders, states, local governments and the public. We have a responsibility to recognize those tribes that have maintained their identity and self-governance despite previous federal policies expressly aimed at destroying tribes. This new process remains rigorous, but it promotes timely decision-making through expedited processes and increases transparency by posting all publicly available petition materials online so that stakeholders are well-informed at each stage of the process."

One of the major changes in the new rules is the beginning date that tribes must document from. According to DOI information, "The previous rule imposed different documentary burdens by evaluating petitioners based on first sustained contact. The final rule implements a uniform date of 1900, which promotes efficiencies over the previous rule while still requiring over a century of documentation."

The new rules also disallow tribes to re-petition. Once the tribe has been denied, it cannot file a new petition. "This includes any petitioners that have reorganized or been renamed or that are wholly or primarily portions of groups that have been denied under these or previous acknowledgment regulations," DOI information states.

NCAI president Brian Cladoosby said on Tuesday, June 30, "Although this is a compromise, NCAI greatly appreciates the effort and commitment from the Administration to get these regulations finalized and to improve the process. NCAI has been pushing for years for all tribes seeking recognition to have a fair and equitable process."

DOI: Pamunkey Indian Tribe recognized, Duwamish denied

WASHINGTON - Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs Kevin K. Washburn issued final determinations for two petitioners under the existing Federal Acknowledgment process on Thursday, July 2. The decisions include a final determination to acknowledge the petitioner known as the Pamunkey Indian Tribe (Petitioner #323) as a federally recognized Indian tribe, and a final determination on remand to decline acknowledgment for the petitioner known as the Duwamish Tribal Organization (DTO) (Petitioner #25).

The Pamunkey Indian Tribe, located in Virginia, was found to have met all seven mandatory criteria for Federal acknowledgment as set forth in 25 CFR Part 83.7. This is the second federal acknowledgment to take place during the Obama Administration.

"This work reflects the most solemn responsibilities of the United States," Washburn said. "Our professional historians, anthropologists, and genealogists spent thousands of hours of staff time researching and applying our rigorous acknowledgment criteria to these petitions."

The Pamunkey Indian Tribe has occupied a land base in southeastern King William County, Virginia - shown on a 1770 map as "Indian Town" - since the Colonial Era in the 1600s. Today, the area exists as a state Indian reservation. The Tribe has a current membership of 203 individuals and elects its own leaders.

The Department also issued a final determination on remand declining to recognize the Duwamish Tribal Organization (DTO). The Department reached the same conclusion in September 2001, declining to acknowledge the DTO following an evaluation under its 1978 regulations. The U.S. District Court in Western Washington vacated that decision in 2013 and remanded it back to the Department for review under 1994 revisions to the regulations or "explain why it declines to do so." This final determination on remand concludes the administrative process: the DTO petitioner does not meet the requirements for Federal acknowledgment as an Indian tribe under either the 1978 or 1994 regulations. The DTO, which first formed in 1925, is headquartered in Seattle, Wash.

Man dies following kayak accident in Park

Great Smoky Mountains National Park rangers responded to a report of a kayak accident at approximately 6:20pm on Thursday, July 2 in the Middle Prong of the Little Pigeon River in the Greenbrier section of the park. Kenneth C. Worthington, age 53, of Apex, capsized his kayak and floated to the river edge where friends pulled him from the river. Park rangers, Gatlinburg Police Department, and Gatlinburg Fire Department responded to the scene and performed CPR on Worthington before he was transported to LeConte Medical Center where he was pronounced dead.

"With the forecast of rain throughout the week, I encourage all visitors to be extremely cautious around rivers as conditions can change unpredictably," said Acting Chief Ranger Steve Kloster. "We want all our visitors to have a memorable experience in the park that is both enjoyable and safe."

River levels can rise rapidly when thunderstorms strike in the mountains. Heavy rains at higher elevations caused flash flooding earlier this month in Greenbrier and Cosby that damaged roads and washed out foot bridges along hiking trails. Rangers remind visitors not to attempt to cross swollen rivers and said hikers should alter their routes to avoid crossing any rising river by waiting until the river has receded or returning by another route.

Women's sports deserve more respect

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

I do not like to dogpile on an issue, but I'll make an exception this week. Sports Illustrated's Andy Benoit tweeted "women's sports in general not worth watching" on June 22. I not only completely disagree with Benoit, but I must ask what sports is he watching?

In all fairness, before I go further, I must report that the day after that tweet, Benoit did apologize, "My sincere apologies for last night's senseless tweets. I got carried away responding to playful ribbing...and, in my stupidity, overcompensated by saying something ignorant and extreme. 100% mistake on my part, for which I'm deeply sorry."

Ok, controversial comment made and subsequently apologized for...now, let's examine the point at hand – women's sports.

Benoit's comments came during the Women's World Cup currently ongoing in Vancouver, Canada. I have watched just about every match televised from the group stage on, and I must say I've been impressed with the level of play. In fact, I made the comment to my wife in the first one we watched that I was enjoying it a lot more than the Men's World Cup because the women didn't flop and fake injuries as much as the men.

The level of play and competition was refreshing.

I am a true fan of sports. Gender doesn't have anything to do with me wanting to or not wanting to watch a sport. I only care about the game itself and the competitiveness and drive of the athletes, and that goes for anything from pee wees to pros.

In a previous column, I discussed the link between sports and academic achievement. Female high school athletes especially benefit from sports participation. According to the Women's Sports Foundation, female athletes are 92 percent less likely to get involved in drugs and three times more likely to graduate than their non-athlete counterparts.

To say that women's sports aren't worth watching means that you aren't giving it a try and that's unfair. Women work just as hard as the men in training. They play just as hard, sometimes harder, as men. In short, they deserve the same respect as men, maybe more.

When I hear someone say, "Oh, they're just girls" or "they play like a bunch of girls", I think of professional athletes like Billie Jean King, Shoni Schimmel, Serena Williams, and Abby Wambach (U.S. Women's Soccer team), and if playing like a girl means working every day to achieve greatness in your sport, then count me in. I want to play like a girl too.

The Trail of Tears in North Carolina: The Roads

TJ HOLLAND
JUNALUSKA MUSEUM

The six forts in North Carolina were placed near populated Cherokee towns and connected by a network of roads. All of these roads were in existence for hundreds, maybe thousands, of years and were used as war and trading paths. Research has only discovered one road, the Old Army Road, that was widened by the U.S. Army so that wagons carrying supplies could get to Fort Montgomery.

Dr. Brett Riggs has said, "The Trail of Tears began at the front door of every home in the Cherokee Nation."

It was through this network of forts and roads that the Cherokee people were taken. The remains of these roads can still be seen in many places in western North Carolina. Below are three of the main routes used by the U.S. Army. Each of these represents a part of the Trail of Tears.

The Great State Road connected Franklin to Murphy through Valleytown. This road connected Camp Scott, Fort Delaney, and Fort Butler. This section of trail originally connected the old Cherokee town of Nikwasi with the Valley Towns Gonahida (Andrews) and Tlanusiyi (Murphy). In the summer of 1776, the Naturalist William Bartram mentions meeting Overhill headman Oconastota along this road.

The Old Army Road ran south from Cheoah to Valleytown. This road connected Fort Montgomery to Fort Delaney and terminated at a connection with the Great State Road. Around 300 Cherokees were taken from their homes in Cheoah, Buffalo Town, Tallulah, and Conichiloe over this route.

The Unicoi Turnpike connected Fort Hembree to Fort Butler. This route then went over the Unicoi Mountains. Passing through other forts along the way, the Unicoi Turnpike connected to Fort Cass where some 16,000 Cherokees would remain through the summer of 1838.

Miss Cherokee report for June

TAYLOR WILNOTY MISS CHEROKEE 2014

Siyo nigada! Hello everyone! I have had a wonderful first month of summer, and I was happy to have gotten to spend it with my community. Although I only had three events come up this month, they were very amazing and important!

My first event was June 5 at the Remember the Removal Bike Ride send-off ceremony, where myself, along with others from the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians and the Cherokee Nation sent off a group of bike riders from both bands on a two-week, 900-mile journey to Talequah, Okla.

On this bike ride, they were taken on one of the routes our ancestors were forced to walk during the "Trail Of Tears." It was a beautiful celebration, wishing the bikers a safe journey, and seeing the two bands come together as one.

SCOTT MCKIE B.P./One Feather

Miss Cherokee Taylor Wilnoty (center) leads the 1st Annual Cherokee Epilepsy Walk, an event she organized, on Saturday, June 27.

My second event was in Atlanta for Native American Heritage Weekend at Philips Arena hosted by the Atlanta Dream, where Native American basketball player Shoni Schimmel plays! It was my first ever professional basketball game, and I was so excited to finally get to see Shoni play in person. I was so excited to see such an inspiration to our community, and watch her do what she does best!

My last event was one very personal to me. During my platform for the Miss Cherokee Pageant, I talked about wanting to bring more awareness to the community about Epilepsy. So, on June 27, I organized the 1st Annual Cherokee Epilepsy Walk/Balloon Release. I was so overwhelmed with the outcome of supporters from the community. We had over 60 people show up and participate in the walk. Many were there in support of my platform, and others were there because someone they love has or had epilepsy. I held this event in honor of my older brother who passed away six years ago on June 27, but I also held it to show those that are living on the Qualla Boundary with epilepsy that they're not alone and many people care about them. I will be holding this event every June, and I hope my supporters continue to grow. I had an amazing month, and I know July will be just the same! Sgi! Thank you!

If you would like for me to attend an event, please contact Tooter Owens with your request!

THANK YOU LETTERS

Thank you to Yogi Crowe Scholarship

Iwould like to extend a letter of gratitude to the Yogi Crowe Scholarship for awarding me with a scholarship for the summer of 2015. They are a continuous support for me as I journey through my endeavors to become a counseling psychologist. With this money, I have been able to pay for the essentials as I am here at MTSU. It is because of their support that I can continue with my education with less financial strains than my cohorts. And for that I am very thankful.

Megan Smith

Thank you to Yogi Crowe Scholarship

My name is Randall Crowe, a recipient of the Yogi Crowe Scholarship Fund. I am a third year law student currently interning at the Tribal Prosecutor's Office. Throughout the duration of the internship, I will be performing my third year practice under the supervision of Tribal Prosecutor Jason Smith.

I would like to thank the board members of the Yogi Crowe Scholarship for making my third year practice possible. As the internship is not paid, I was forced between taking the unpaid internship or getting a job at the beginning of the summer. Luckily, the Yogi Crowe Scholarship provided me with the necessary living expenses to accept the unpaid internship opportunity and receive class credit from Charlotte School of Law.

I would like to thank the contributors to the scholarship because without them, my internship would not be possible. Thankfully, there are many contributors who keep the memory of Yogi Crowe and the Scholarship alive. The many contributors are also proof of how many people the Scholarship has helped over the year, like myself. Thanks to the Yogi Scholarship, I am well on my way to reaching my educational goals and securing my place as a future contributor.

*Thank you,
Randall Crowe, Charlotte*

Business Spotlight: Two Crowes Ice Cream

AMBLE SMOKER ONE FEATHER STAFF

Tagan Crowe's Two Crowes Ice Cream celebrated its first anniversary in the Cherokee Cultural District over the Fourth of July weekend. Crowe is the 19-year-old son of Radonna and Peanut Crowe from the Big Y community in Cherokee and began his entrepreneurial career after investing his EBCI Minor's Fund Distribution towards opening the ice cream shop.

"My sister and I put our money together and decided we wanted to open a business," said Crowe. "We did it last year (2014), and it was pretty successful, so we're going to do it again this year and hopefully for years to come."

Two Crowe's Ice Cream began when Tagan, along with his sister Madison Crowe, leased the space across from the Qualla Arts and Crafts Mutual. The previous attendant had previously sold ice cream, and with the ice cream equipment already in place, the two took control of the operation. After a few calls to Hershey's Ice Cream, the type sold in the shop, the business opened on the Fourth of July weekend in 2014.

"It was a pretty easy start-up business and kind of a turn-key thing, so we kept it," explained Crowe. "Now we're trying to branch off and do a little bit of food service with it, but we're not where we want to be yet. We want to expand, but we want the ice cream shop to be as good as it can be first."

Tagan Crowe scoops some ice cream in his business, which celebrated its one-year anniversary recently, Two Crowes Ice Cream.

(AMBLE SMOKER/One Feather)

"We have actually bought an ice cream bike; we're just waiting for it to get here. Our plan is to be peddling around downtown selling ice cream." Two Crowe's Ice Cream currently has seven employees from the Cherokee community. Owning and managing a business at the age of 19 may seem like a daunting task, but Crowe shares how he has taken on a leadership role.

"Sometimes you have to be kind of strict with your workers," he said. "You can't be hateful, but you can get aggravated really easy. You have to learn how to tone it down and say things in a way that makes sense to your employees. There's a lot of paperwork, but it's nothing you can't handle."

Crowe is currently a freshman at Western Carolina University. He attributes that his ability to transfer his life skills and knowledge into the business was through the education he is currently receiving.

"Education taught me a lot as far as how to keep up with receipts for taxes, spreadsheets, and scheduling. I wouldn't have known that if I hadn't gone to college. It (education) was extremely helpful."

When asked what advice he would like to pass along to Tribal members who may be receiving their

Minor's Fund Distribution, Crowe said, "Make sure you're going to feel comfortable with the decisions you make. Don't be afraid to ask anybody for help along the way, whether you're going to invest in stocks, mutual funds, or even starting your own business. Make sure you go to people you trust and are going to give you the truth. Be aware that you're probably not going to know everything. Save more than you spend."

AMBLE SMOKER ONE FEATHER STAFF

First Sergeant Robert Stephenson Youngdeer is a United States Marine Corps and US Army Veteran from the Birdtown community in Cherokee. He served eight years in the US Marine Corps and 12 years in the US Army and is a former Principal Chief of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians.

1SG Youngdeer served on the 1st Marine Raider Battalion in the Guadalcanal Campaign and landed on Aug. 7, 1942.

"I heard a sea battle one night when we lost three US heavy cruisers to Japan," said Youngdeer. "I was on the beach and could hear the gunfire and see the flashes. The Japanese were landing troops every chance they got in an attempt to retake the Guadalcanal. On Sept. 13, we had the battle of Bloody Ridge and Edson Ridge. The next day, I was shot by a sniper. It hit me under the left nostril and the bullet came out right below my right left ear. I was in the hospital for six months."

"They evacuated the wounded by air, they went to New Zealand, then by hospital ship," Youngdeer added. "The first person I saw when I was aboard the hospital ship was my brother, Henry. Henry was in the 1st Marine Parachute Battalion. The same hours of the day I was shot, he had been bayonnetted. We were on the hospital ship together to Wellington, New Zealand to recuperate so we could go back, which we did."

1SG Youngdeer received basic training at Parris Island, SC. He said, "Our favorite name for Parris Island was Paradise Island. The drill instructors were pretty mean." From Parris Island, he went to Norfolk, Va. by train, New York, NY by ship, then, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba by ship. "In Guantanamo Bay, I saw boys I went to Cherokee Boarding School with. They were Chuck Jackson, Sheridan Smith, Harrold Winkler, and Thurman Hornbuckle. They had all joined the Marines as well."

1SG Youngdeer received the Purple Heart and the Naval Accommodation Ribbon in lieu of the Silver Star.

The EBCI Housing and Community Development Division raised a total of $2,306 selling raffle tickets at the recent Housing Fair. The Division donated half of that ($1,153) to the Cherokee Children's Home with the other half being split between the PHHS Transitional Housing Program and the PHHS Family Safety Program. The donation was made on Wednesday, July 1 at the HCD Program building. Shown (left-right) are Skooter McCoy, Cherokee Boys Club general manager; Betty Reagan, Family Safety social worker; Tamara Jackson, Transitional Housing program coordinator; Charlene Owle, Qualla Housing Authority director; Paulette Cox, Housing and Community Development; and Cris Weatherford, Cherokee Children's Home manager.

WCU Cherokee Center donates to financial education

Roseanna Belt, director of the Western Carolina University Cherokee Center, presented a check for $1,700 to Lavita Hill Lambert and Cindy Chandler on Tuesday, June 30 to go toward financial education for youth in the community. The Cherokee Center, under the Division of Educational Outreach, was the administrator of the original Qualla Financial Freedom effort which began in 2003, with funding from the Cherokee Preservation Foundation. Its purpose, which continues today, through a tribal program headed up by Lambert of the Cooperative Extension Office, is to continually improve the financial health of the Cherokee people. This token is to ensure that WCU and the Cherokee Center fully support the effort to provide education to the community for financial management.

Conserve. Restore. Connect.

Human history is written all around the Great Smoky Mountains and the western North Carolina landscape. And when history is tied to the land and the water, a natural partnership can develop between conservation and preservation.

Bird monitoring lessons

"Our mission at the Little Tennessee Land Trust (LTLT) is to conserve the waters, forests, farms and heritage of the Upper Little Tennessee and Hiwassee River Valleys," said Sharon Taylor, executive director of the LTLT. "And we honor the partnership we have with the Cherokee Preservation Foundation (CPF) to help further our initiatives to conserve and preserve the natural history of our region and the Cherokee homeland."

Since 1997, the LTLT has successfully established partnerships with many agencies, conservation organizations and funders to create vigorous land protection and bottomland restoration programs.

With the efforts brought forth through funding by the CPF, regional relationships are strengthened between the Eastern Band of the Cherokee Indians (EBCI) and residents throughout western North Carolina.

"This region has a rich heritage and much of that history would be lost if not for the efforts of the LTLT," said Taylor. "We are thankful for the support of the CPF to help educate our communities and continue the work to conserve, restore and connect."

One of the grants awarded to the LTLT by the CPF is to continue the restoration of river cane and other resources (butternut, yellowroot, mulberry, hazelnuts) on the historic Welch Farm and to fund management of artisan resources on LTLT's Tennessee Bottomland Preserve. River cane was once one of the most abundant plants in the southeast and formed impenetrable forests growing along the region's riverbanks. It is one of the most traditional material used by the Cherokee with evidence of its use going back 500 years.

"Over the past century, the loss of the river cane has meant a loss to the economic growth for the Cherokee people," said Taylor. "It is also an important streamside plant. River cane has a strong root system that anchors the soil and prevents erosion."

Another CPF grant was also awarded to LTLT to enhance the bird monitoring, research, and education programs tied to the national MAPS (Monitoring Productivity and Survivorship) program. The program engages Cherokee students and educational materials were produced to present information on native birds in Cherokee and English.

"The work we are doing thanks to the funding by the CPF is making a difference," said Taylor. "Their support is helping to protect our natural habitat, conserve our region's most ecologically important places, and help support our local communities."

The Garden Bug

Every part of the foxglove plant is toxic to humans and animals, including the roots and seeds. In some instances, people have confused foxglove with the comfrey plant (which is often brewed into a tea) with often harmful consequences. As dangerous as it is, the foxglove plant contains a chemical from which digoxin, a heart medication, is made. Digoxin can increase the strength of heart muscle contractions, change heart rate, and increase heart blood output. - Brenda Weaver
