Remember the Removal Riders visit Nashville

NASHVILLE – Tenn. - The 2015 Remember the Removal ride is currently completing a three-week journey to retrace the northern route of the Trail of Tears. Cyclists involved with this historical tribute ride shared their experiences in Nashville on Friday, June 12 with members of the United South and Eastern Tribes, Inc. (USET), Indian Health Service Nashville Area Office (BIA), and the Bureau of Indian Affairs Eastern Regional Office (BIA-ERO). Twelve riders from the Cherokee Nation and seven riders from the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians have combined to cross seven states along the 950-mile trail.

June 11 marked the fifth straight cycling day that Remember the Removal Riders have completed with members of both Tribes. The ride began on Sunday, June 7 in New Echota, Ga., the former capital of the Cherokee Nation, and is scheduled to end on Thursday, June 25 in Tahlequah, Okla.

The riders described their journey retracing the history through extreme heat, rugged and steep terrain, and the experiences with people who they encountered. Joey Owle, an EBCI tribal member who completed the Removal Ride in 2013, stated, "The riders have had to work through some hot conditions, uphill, and downhill, all the while encouraging each other. There have been people who have stopped to pray for and with us to give us support.

Then there have been some (people) who have not been as nice. Along with the historical points along the trail, the riders are getting a taste of how the Trail of Tears really was".

Owle joins the Remember the Removal ride as part of the support team along with Cherokee Nations Ride Coordinator Joseph Erb.

"One of the greatest challenges facing our Tribal nations is educating ourselves and the world about the history, traditions, and culture of our people," USET president Brian Patterson said on Friday. "This ride is one way we can get close to walking in the moccasins of our ancestors, to understand the trauma they experienced, and celebrate the legacy they left for us through their suffering and strong work to leave a place for the Cherokee to thrive. We send our prayers and medicine to the Remember the Removal riders on this day."

Indian Health Service Nashville Area Office Area Director Martha Ketcher gave supporting words to the riders. "We support you and your dedication, as demonstrated by your participation in this event that honors and gives reverence to our ancestors by this Remembering the Removal Bike Ride. You put words into action by exemplifying and promoting healthy lifestyle activities that is indicative of the strength and resilience of our people. We pray for safe travels as you progress along the trail."

Riders from the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians are Kelly Murphy, Jake Stephens, Corlee Thomas-Hill, Kevin Tafoya, Darius Thompson, Savannah Hicks, and Matt Martens. The riders from the Cherokee Nation are Charles "Billy" Flint, Tristan Trumbla, Kayla Davis, Haylee Caviness, Tanner Crow, Shawna Harter, Maggie McKinnis, Wrighter Weavel, Caleb Cox, Alexis Watt, Tennessee Loy, and Hailey Seago.

serving on this Council to represent the EBCI and all the other tribes across North Carolina. Being on the Council allows me to be a voice for all Native American's residing in North Carolina that has a disability."

Lambert holds a master's of arts degree in educational administration from Western Carolina University, along with a bachelor's of science degree in business administration. She is currently the Executive Director for Vocational Opportunities of Cherokee, Inc. which includes the Cherokee Tribal Vocational Rehabilitation Program. She also serves as a Governor appointee to the NC State Independent Living Council.

Lambert also holds the distinction of being the first EBCI tribal member to serve on the NC State Rehabilitation Council. Her term expires in 2018.

Two missing hikers found in Park

Rangers at Great Smoky Mountains National Park found a missing woman and her son from Fond Du Lac, Wisconsin on Monday, June 8. The two had been reported being lost in the park on Sunday, June 7.

Christy Barns, 40, and her son, Casey, 16, had sent a text message to family members on Sunday evening at 8:38 p.m. stating they were lost and needed help. Rangers were notified and were able to locate the individuals' vehicle at Clingmans Dome. The ground search was initiated on Monday morning and the pair was soon found in good condition along the Forney Creek trail a little before 2p.m.

The Park had mobilized an incident management team and deployed search teams to the trails surrounding Clingmans Dome. The search involved 30 National Park Services employees with 15 of those actively searching in the field. The initial search focused on trails which carried the highest probability of where the pair may have been located.

Fly Fishing Museum of the Southern Appalachians opens

CARSON LAMBERT
ONE FEATHER INTERN

The Fly Fishing Museum of the Southern Appalachians opened its doors to the public with a grand opening kickoff which included a ribbon cutting ceremony with Principal Chief Michell Hicks, a casting clinic, and free barbecue sandwiches on Saturday, June 6.

The non-profit museum, which is owned by the Cherokee Chamber of Commerce and is located beside the Welcome Center on Tsali Blvd, features an assortment of vintage reels, flies, and memorabilia from legendary fishermen across the Southern Appalachian region and beyond. One such individual is "Uncle" Mark Cathey (1871-1944) who famously remarked, "I been accused of being the best fisherman in the Smokies."

The Chamber of Commerce hopes that the museum will be able to sustain itself through gift shop sales and individual donations as well as generate more interest in a pastime which already has a sizable economic impact of more than $25 million annually on the Qualla Boundary.

"We have so many fishermen coming here but Cherokee hasn't historically done a great job to have a single base for fishermen," said Forrest Parker, EBCI Deputy Operations Officer and museum board member.

CARSON LAMBERT/One Feather intern

Principal Chief Michell Hicks cuts the ribbon to officially open The Fly Fishing Museum of the Southern Appalachians, located in Cherokee, on Saturday, June 6.

This museum now provides anglers from across the country with place to become acquainted with regional fishing culture and also receive information about fishing sites in Cherokee and local retailers.

"They've done an excellent job," said local man Bill Queen. "The rods, and reels, and all the exhibits really bring back good memories of my fishing in the late [19]50s."

The idea to put a museum in Cherokee dedicated to fly fishing actually came from Huntersville fishing enthusiast Alen Baker, who, while fishing for Salmon in Nova Scotia visited a museum in the Margaree Valley. He enjoyed his experience and when a friend later joked that Baker should start his own museum the thought stuck.

As he continued to travel he talked to museums and several state history departments to explore the feasibility of his project. After many rejections, Bryson City author Jim Casada, a good friend of Baker's, suggested he pursue Cherokee as a potential site.

Baker presented his dream to Parker who took the idea and ran with it. The Chamber initially thought to house the collection in their former headquarters which was the log cabin across the street from Dairy Queen on Tsali Blvd. This building was, however, in desperate need of repairs.

"The next time I came up [Forrest] says, 'There's good news and bad news.' He says, 'The bad news is they're not gonna agree to the renovation grant.' He said, 'The good news is they think we're thinking a little small when we ought to be looking at a bigger building,'" said Baker.

It did not take long to decide that the building which had previously been the Tee Pee Restaurant was the perfect site.

"The location is ideal here. It couldn't be better," said Baker. "The Welcome Center's next door; the Chamber can operate with the Welcome Center in harmony. It's just ideal."

Through extensive

fund raising efforts and aid from various grants, the building was transformed from its idle state into the preserve for the region's aquatic heritage that it is today. The opening of the museum is a testament to the conjoined efforts of many individuals as well as organizations including the EBCI, Tennessee Valley Authority, Trout Unlimited and the relatively new charity Casting for Hope.

Through the whole process, Baker continuously made the trip back and forth between Huntersville and Cherokee to contribute to making his dream a reality.

As for how he plans to relax in his new-found free time Baker said, "I'm going fishing."

Tournament raises money for Shawn Blanton Scholarship

The 8th Annual Trooper Shawn Blanton Scholarship Golf Tournament was held at the Sequoyah National Golf Club on Friday, June 12. Proceeds from the event will go towards the Trooper Shawn Blanton Scholarship Fund which awards female athletes who are members of their high school softball team. This year's recipients received a $1,000 scholarship to the college of their choice and included: Callie Kuyendall from Pisgah, Jadrian Penland from Hayesville, Katie Fortner from Smoky Mountain, Kaylee Corbin from Franklin, Ellie Caldwell from North Henderson, Jordan Harris from Enka, and Tara Raper from Hiwassee Dam.

The annual golf tournament was first set up in 2008 as a way to honor the late Trooper Shawn Blanton, the first EBCI tribal member to serve as a North Carolina Highway Patrol Trooper. To date, the scholarship fund has raised nearly $49,000 for female student athletes.

ON THE SIDELINES

Unfair to compare athletes of different generations

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

The movie, "Rocky Balboa", is centered around Rocky's comeback of sorts to fight current champion Mason Dixon following a computer simulation showing the two fighting. If you haven't seen the movie yet, I won't give away spoilers, but the premise of the movie is not uncommon in that we frequently question how athletes of different generations would fare against each other. As I write this column, the Cleveland Cavaliers are in the middle of a run at the NBA Championship which, if they are successful, would make the third ring for superstar LeBron James. My favorite basketball player of all time, like millions of other people around the globe, is Michael Jordan, but I am also a fan of James.

James has been compared, sometimes unfairly, to Jordan since he hit the NBA in the 2003-04 season. "I was a Chicago Bulls, Michael Jordan fan growing up," James once said.

The debate has raged for years. Will James ever surpass Jordan? Could Jordan dunk over James? Could James dunk over Jordan? Who is the real King?

Who cares? They're both great basketball players, but in sports, comparisons seem almost obligatory.

When he retired (officially and finally), Jordan had amassed six NBA championship titles, six NBA finals MVP awards, 5 NBA MVP awards, and two Olympic Gold Medals (1984, 1992). To date, James has two NBA championship titles, two NBA finals MVP awards, 4 NBA MVP awards, and three Olympic medals (bronze in 2004 and gold in 2008 and 2012). That's a lot of hardware, and James is still adding to his so time will tell how they stack up in the trophy room department.

Last week, I saw a video on YouTube where someone had superimposed the 1973 Belmont Stakes, won by Triple Crown winner Secretariat, over the 2015 Belmont Stakes which was won by Triple Crown winner American Pharoah. The premise of the video is that Secretariat would have beaten American Pharoah.

True, Secretariat posted better times in each of the three Triple Crown races than did American Pharoah (Kentucky Derby - Secret.: 1:59, AP: 2:03.02; Preakness Stakes - Secret.: 1:53, AP: 1:58.46; Belmont Stakes - Secret.: 2:24, AP: 2:26.65). But, what does that prove? Those are just times.

Secretariat ran against four other horses. American Pharoah ran against seven others. It's just so hard to say that Secretariat would win just because the times are different. What about track and weather conditions? They would have to be identical to make a true comparison.

As long as there are sports though, sportswriters and commentators will analyze and compare athletes. Pro football great Eric Dickerson put it best when he said, "Them sportswriters don't even know how to put uniforms on, most of 'em."

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

"So, I would say 'Omaha', and I would say it again and then say 'set hut' and do whatever you think you need to be doing and let's go play football," Eli Manning said in explaining the meaning of "Omaha".

Kituwah and the Kituwah Celebration

TJ HOLLAND
JUNALUSKA MUSEUM

Over the centuries, our people have been known by different names. The Musko-gees called us Chiloque, and amongst ourselves as Ani yunwiya. While today we are known as Cherokee. Most importantly, we are Ani kituwahgi, or “people of Kituwah”.

Kituwah was the first mother town, and we are blessed to able to go to the place where we originated as a people. Kituwah is where clan law was established, and the first sacred fire was placed and a mound made and a council house placed on top.

The mound today is around 6 feet tall. Photos taken in the 1940s suggest the mound was over 16 feet in height after 120 years of plowing.

It is believed that originally the mound would have been around 20 feet tall.

Under the terms of the Treaty of 1819, brothers Yonaguska, Big Tom, and Yonaegwa (Big Bear) tried to keep possession of Kituwah, but were unsuccessful. But in 1996, the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians purchased Kituwah, our first major land purchase since the Civil War era.

Kituwah is recognized as a sacred site not only by the EBCI, but also the Cherokee Nation and the United Kituwah Band. For the past 15 years, a celebration has been held in June, and members of all three nations come together in the place where we all come from.

This year’s Kituwah Celebration will be held Friday, June 19 from 6-8pm. Everyone is welcome to attend for an evening of food, entertainment, and fellowship.

Tribal members honored in SCC pinning ceremonies

SYLVA - Graduating students in eight of Southwestern Community College's health sciences programs were honored during pinning ceremonies that took place recently at the Jackson Campus. Several EBCI tribal members were honored including: Angela Cucumber, therapeutic massage program; Charlotte Saunooke, medical assisting program; Giuliana Staton, respiratory therapy program; Jessica Higdon, nursing assistant program; Rustlina Long, nursing assistant program; Zachary Lambert, nursing assistant program; and Saundra Wade, nursing assistant program.

This was the first year human services technology held a pinning ceremony, joining the nursing assistant, medical assistant, therapeutic massage, emergency medical science, nursing, respiratory therapy and physical therapist assistant programs.

"These students develop extremely strong bonds from working together so closely over a two-year period, and our pinning ceremonies give them a chance to appropriately express how much they appreciate their friendships and the training they've received," said Mitch Fischer, dean of health sciences at SCC. "Our health sciences programs are especially challenging, and we're so proud of all these students who persevered and made it to the finish line."

OBITUARIES

Timothy Hill

Timothy Hill, 35, of the Big Cove Community, passed away unexpectedly on Tuesday, June 9, 2015. A native of Cherokee, he was the son of Sandra Faye Hill of Cherokee and the late Nicodemus Bird. He was a member of Straight Fork Baptist Church and the Big Cove Stickball Team. He was a coach and brother of the Ko-la-nv-yi Indian Ball Team.

He was preceded in death by his grandparents, Jesse Hill Sr., William and Leona Bird; and his great grandmother, Rachel Watty.

In addition to his mother, he is survived by his son, Cyrus; two brothers, Dean Hill and Pat Hill; two sisters, Lena Driver and husband Bill Driver, Joni Hill and fiancée Chris Ledford; grandmother, Yonnie Watty Hill; special companion, Donna Armachain; his right hand man John Cooper; six nephews, and four nieces, all of Cherokee.

His family and friends remember him as a man of strong faith with genuine concern for his son, nieces, nephews, and cousins. He approached life with a light heart and an appreciation for humor. He was actively involved in the Big Cove community where he dedicated many hours coaching youth in basketball and Indian Ball.

Funeral services were held on Sunday, June 14 at Straight Fork Baptist Church. Revs. Charles Ray Ball and James (Bo) Parris officiated with burial in the Hill Family Cemetery.

Pallbearers were his friends and family.

Elect RICHIE SNEED VICE-CHIEF

Wellbriety Summer Moon event to honor Cherokee youth

The Cherokee Healing and Wellness Coalition is sponsoring a Wellbriety Summer Moon celebration and covered dish lunch on Saturday, June 20 from 11am – 2pm at Pavilion #1 at the Oconaluftee Island Park. Everyone is invited.

“In keeping with Native Tradition to honor the growing season of summer, we proudly honor the Cherokee Youth Council as they demonstrate well-balanced and selfless giving leaders,” the Coalition said in a statement.

The covered dish lunch will be at 11:30 a.m. The Coalition will provide tea, coffee, water, plates, cups, utensils and chicken.

Please bring a side dish to share. Healthy local and traditional Cherokee foods are encouraged.

The Coalition statement went on to say, “June is the month that the Cherokee People began to prepare for celebrations of all things growing. It is also the time to do home repairs and help those in need. We have many groups here in Cherokee and in Snowbird that are committed to helping others. The Cherokee Healing and Wellness Coalition is committed to enhancing the lives of people by honoring and reclaiming the seven Cherokee core values especially in the promotion of clean, wholesome, healthy life styles. The seven core values are: spirituality, harmony, education, sense of place, honoring the past, strong character, and sense of humor.”

Coalition Vice Chair Carol Long said, “Join us as we celebrate the beginning of summer and honor the young people who are such an inspiration to many of us.”
