New state law will establish certification process for Cherokee language teachers

A double-faceted bill passed the North Carolina General Assembly on Monday, June 11 that will be a game-changer for the way fluent Cherokee speakers work in the classroom to teach their language. House Bill 92, introduced in February 2017, passed 113-0 on Monday and states “the State Board of Education shall enter into a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians specifying the criteria that must be met in order for individuals to teach Cherokee language and culture classes”. Governor Roy Cooper signed the bill into law on Wednesday, June 13.

“This is the direct result of the work we did in Raleigh a few months ago, and our efforts are paying dividends!” said Principal Chief Richard G. Sneed. “Thanks to the members of Council that traveled to Raleigh with me and Vice Chief Ensley in support of this bill!”

Renissa McLaughlin, EBCI Education and Training director and former KPEP (Kituwah Preservation and Education Program) director, has worked on this initiative for almost a decade. “It is intended to assist those public schools that wanted to have Cherokee language SPEAKERS: A state bill, signed into law on Wednesday, June 13, paves the way for Cherokee speakers, such as those pictured here at the Cherokee Language Consortium at New Kituwah Academy on the morning of Thursday, June 14, to go through a process and test to become certified Cherokee language teachers. The Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians will enter into a memorandum of understanding with the State Board of Education to develop that process.

teachers certified so that it didn't impact them negatively.”

Throughout the process, she has worked with Dr. Hartwell Francis, KPEP education curriculum developer, who worked formerly with the Western Carolina University Cherokee Language Program. “What the process does is it stabilizes regional school system's employment process so they can hire a teacher as a teacher instead of hiring somebody who is going to work with a teacher. At Swain (County High School), the teacher had to work with a professionally-certified Spanish teacher to have a Cherokee language class. So, you ended up having two teachers in the classroom. This can create a little bit of conflict if their teaching styles are a little bit different.”

He added, “Also, there is no need to expend those resources when you do have a Cherokee language teacher. The only problem was this Cherokee language teacher, a full professional teacher, didn't have the certification because no certification for Cherokee language exists.”

The bill states that the MOU shall include the following, “(1) Requirements for approval of individuals employed under this section, including a requirement that the individual has demonstrated mastery of the Cherokee language through a credential issued by the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians; (2) A three-year approval period, which may be renewed, for individuals employed under this section; (3) Authority of the Superintendent of Public Instruction or the Superintendent's designee to approve and renew approval of individuals employed under this section, subject to the requirements of the memorandum of understanding; (4) Requirements for renewing approval of individuals employed under this section after three years; and (5) A clear statement that an individual authorized to teach pursuant to this section shall not be permitted to provide instruction in other content areas unless the individual possesses a license issued in accordance with G.S. 115C-270.20.”

McLaughlin said they have done their homework and are ready to hammer out the MOU immediately. “This entire process isn't just shooting blindfolded. It's structured. It follows guidelines. We have worked with NCDPI (North Carolina Department of Public Instruction) and ACTFL (American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages), so it is a legitimate testing instrument.”

Both McLaughlin and Dr. Francis agree that teaching the Cherokee language is much different than teaching other languages such as Spanish or French.

“When we met with ACTFL, they brought people down that normally coach or mentor people, the proctors, in Spanish, and there was such a disconnect,” said McLaughlin. “Those romance languages and English, they’re flat. Cherokee is a multi-dimensional language. Because of the uniqueness of the language it is really hard to take the square, which is modern education today and the instruction of languages, and then Cherokee language which is this holistic type of language where there are so many things and nuances to the language that don’t exist in any other language – time, ownership, shape. There are five verb stems when you’re trying to ask for something. It isn’t a flat language. It’s a living language.”

Dr. Francis stated, “The Cherokee language is something different that is lived. It’s a lived experience rather than a paper experience. We’ll see a greater understanding in the community of what it means to learn the Cherokee language, and we’ll also be able to certify these people who’ve put in the time over the past 20 years teaching Cherokee language but have been disenfranchised by the system.”

McLaughlin said that while they have worked with various organizations over the years on this, those organizations are not the experts when it comes to the Cherokee language. “It’s exercising our sovereignty – we’re the experts, the Tribe. We’re the experts. We need to own this test. We will abide by the rules. We’ve put it through the ringer, and we’ve come out with this product and we need to move forward with it.”

She added that having Cherokee language certified teachers in the public schools will raise the interest of non-Cherokee students and will help build bridges and relationships. “That will, hopefully, build some awareness with those other students and have them gain a better appreciation of Cherokee history and culture. It’s a ripple, and it’s going to be a ripple of good, positive relationships and raising new appreciation and awareness of the language in general.”

Dr. Francis noted, “The Tribe wants to create speakers in the community, not just people who know a little bit about the language or know some words in the language but actual speakers who can step into a classroom and teach social studies in the Cherokee language.”

The bill had another part which authorizes the state to issue an EBCI license plate to tribal members. There will be no additional fee amount charged for these specialty plates, just the regular motor vehicle registration fees. The plate can have a design and verbage designating it as an EBCI plate, but there is not a final design yet.

Boys Club's printing service closing, leaving legacy

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

The printing service of the Cherokee Boys Club, open since the early 1980s, has been hit by the global downturn of the print industry. It will close operations on Friday, June 29.

"At the Boys Club, we hate that we've had to come to this decision, but it's not the first at the Boys Club," said Skooter McCoy, Cherokee Boys Club general manager. "There have been other departments, over the years, that we've had to step away from, but we're very fortunate and God has always taken care of us. We close one door, close one department, something tends to open up."

He said over the years, the Boys Club used to have a laundry service, a food service department for Cherokee Central Schools, and run sanitation vehicles for the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. "We've done a lot of different things over the years, and when it comes time for those things to come to an end, we've had to step away and look for a new direction. We've been very blessed and very fortunate that we've found those opportunities, and we'll do the same with this. We'll find something else that we think will be the next phase for the Boys Club. Whatever the future brings, we'll go at it wholeheartedly. We believe in our motto, 'By Prayer and By Work'."

McCoy added, "We apologize to the community for the inconvenience, and we wish we could keep the doors open. We have been working very hard on this for the last four years. We have taken many different steps and have basically exhausted every avenue we could to make this work."

When it started, the department was originally known as Cherokee Communications and was a training ground for young Cherokee students.

"The true intent of the service was to provide printing services,

"In this day and age,
printing anything hard copy is uphill..."

- Skooter McCoy, Cherokee Boys Club general manager and some other services, to the community that the Boys Club felt were not being met such as printing stationery, business cards, banners, signage, some graphic arts," said McCoy. "One of the main focuses early on is that it was a learning opportunity for students at Cherokee High School."

Students were brought by bus to the company to learn the printing business. When the high school ended that program on their end, the emphasis shifted to a revenue-based business. "It was no longer a training opportunity. It was no longer an educational opportunity. So, then we just had to start focusing on just the bottom line."

A downturn in the printing business worldwide was the catalyst for the closing. "In this day and age, printing anything hard copy is uphill...from that aspect, it's very hard to continue to produce the hard copy version of things people are needing...as time went on, there were just less and less opportunities out there."

Of one large client, Harrah's Cherokee Casino Resort, McCoy noted, "One of the things that we did very well for them actually just disappeared, no fault of ours, no fault of Harrah's, but, instead of us printing the coupon book that we'd printed for the last 20 years, now, it is going to the smartphone of that player at the casino. So, they are just able to scan the screen of their phone instead of us printing the coupon ticket. It's just a shift of industry and things going digital started taking away a lot of things that were kind of our meat and potatoes of what we did."

McCoy said the Boys Club made business decisions over the past several years to try to keep the department running. "Throughout the past couple of years, we did a few reduction-in-force type moves to try to cut off some of the overhead costs of the program. By doing so, we became very small, very limited in staff, and at that point, we were asking the team that we did have to put in a lot of hours and a lot of effort – which they did and they did without complaint."

Several years ago, CBC Printing changed its name to Qualla Office Solutions and branched out to selling office supplies as well as providing printing services. "We were hoping that the supplemental revenue coming in from selling paper and office supplies to tribal programs and entities and the business sector in western North Carolina would help make ends meet. But, we quickly learned that in the world of office supply, that if you're not moving unbelievable amounts of volume, the return on investment is very, very small."

McCoy said the small staff of three currently there, with one manager, has performed valiantly in recent years. "We feel the efforts of the department are as good as ever. We've had great supervision of the team. The team's work ethic was beyond anything that we could have ever asked for. We fault no one inside the organization whatsoever."

The employees and their well-being have been at the forefront of thought by Boys Club officials. "At the end of the day, we want to make sure that the employees who are in that department have a place to land...the small team that we have left running the show has shown just unbelievable efforts, and we're very proud of them. We're doing our very best to find a place inside the walls of the CBC for them to land."

McCoy said that Qualla Office Solution is no longer taking new orders, but he assured that all existing orders will be filled prior to closing.

Study finds older use of tobacco than previously thought

SCOTT MCKIE B.P.
ONE FEATHER STAFF

A study into the use of tobacco has yielded some interesting findings including dating the practice to around 4,000 years ago – about 1,500 years older than previously thought. The study, “Evidence of Tobacco from a Late Archaic Smoking Tube Recovered from the Flint River site in southeastern North America”, has been undertaken by various researchers and was led by Dr. Stephen B. Carmody, Troy University (Ala.) assistant professor of anthropology.

“For the past eight or nine years, I have been exploring pipe use, pipe-smoked plants, and the use of tobacco here in the eastern woodlands of North America,” said Dr. Carmody. “We have made several interesting finds. Until recently, the earliest evidence for the use of tobacco was discovered in a pipe that was approximately 2,500 years old, dating to what we refer to as the Early Woodland Period.”

He added, “One of my great interests has always been the disconnect between this evidence and the appearance of pipes in the archaeological record much earlier. Recently, myself and a group of researchers tested a pipe that is much older, dating to the Late Archaic Period, and it tested positive for nicotine. This find pushes tobacco use back almost 1,500 years and into a time period when we see people first starting to domesticate other plants.”

Dr. Carmody stated the research team has analyzed pipes in North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Arkansas, and Mississippi. “The detection of nicotine in a Late Archaic smoking tube was recovered from the Flint River Archaeological site,” he noted. “The age of the artifact was established by radiocarbon dating of con-pipe which is the main subject of the paper was found, is in northern Alabama where the Flint and Tennessee Rivers come together. The pipe itself was actually unearthed by Tennessee Valley Authority archaeologists sometime between June 1938 and December 1939 prior to the area being submerged several years later due to the damming of the Tennessee River.

temporaneous deer bone collagen which sets the age of the smoking tube at 1685 – 1530 BC. As nicotine is a biomarker for tobacco, this resets the arrival of tobacco in North America by at least a millennium earlier than previous studies would indicate.”

According to the paper, the researchers tested 36 pipes from 22 sites. The Flint River site, where the

from the study, the paper states, “This significant discovery adds to our archaeological understanding of the late Archaic period in the Eastern Woodlands. And, while this provides clarity to questions surrounding the timing of tobacco’s adoptions and diffusion through the region, questions remain about which species of tobacco was first adopted and how the plant’s cultivation contributed to changing subsistence practices in the region.”

In the acknowledgements section of the paper, the researchers wrote, “We would like to thank the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians for their financial support of this research project. Funds for the C dates were provided by the University of Tennessee, Knoxville and Jan Simek. Additional support was provided by a Rhodes College Faculty Development Grant. We would also like to thank members of the University of Alabama’s Office of Archaeological Research for supporting our research by providing time, labor, and access to collections. We also thank James Cizdziel and Karen Mosely for their assistance in the analysis of the artifacts, and two anonymous reviewers whose suggestions improved the manuscript.”

The research was published recently in the “Journal of Archaeological Science Reports”. In addition to Dr. Carmody, the following researchers/authors will be included on the paper: Dr. Jera Davis, archaeologist, New South Associates, Inc.; Dr. Surendar Tadi, University of Mississippi Department of Biomolecular Sciences; Dr. Joshua S. Sharp, University of Mississippi Department of Biomolecular Sciences; Ryan K. Hunt, Rhodes College Department of Chemistry; and Jon Russ, Rhodes College Department of Chemistry.

State banishment law increases penalty for those trespassing on tribal land

A new North Carolina state law increases the penalty for those who have been banished from tribal lands of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians who decide to try to return illegally. House Bill 744 was passed 109-0 on Wednesday, June 15 and was ratified by Gov. Roy Cooper on Friday, June 15.

"HB 744 creates the punitive mechanism that has been missing from the banishment provision of tribal law," said Principal Chief Richard G. Sneed. "Previously, when Tribal Council banished a non-enrolled person from tribal lands, there was no mechanism in place to deter them from coming right back to the Boundary because it was only a Class 3 misdemeanor. If they returned, the state court would have to charge them since we have no jurisdiction over non-enrolled persons except in the event of a domestic violence charge."

According to information from the General Assembly, "...House Bill 744 would make it a first-degree trespass for a person to enter onto or remain upon lands of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians after having been excluded by resolution passed by the Tribal Council. A first offense would be a Class 2 misdemeanor, and any subsequent offense would be a Class I felony, including a fine of not less than $1,000."

Chief Sneed said he is grateful for the help received in the bill. "A special thanks to former Tribal Council Chairman Bill Taylor, of Wolfstown, for his work on this legislation. Also, the Tribe is extremely grateful to N.C. Senator Jim Davis who testified in support of our bill in two committees and on the North Carolina Senate floor."

House Bill 744 will become effective Dec. 1 and will apply to offenses committed on or after that date.

The power of exclusion (banishment) is located in Chapter 2 of the Cherokee Code. The Cherokee One Feather has compiled and keeps an up-to-date list of those people who have been banished. It can be found here: <https://theonefeather.com/ebsci-banishment-list/>

Hill sentenced to four years for role in Smokemont murder

ASHEVILLE – Johnathan Hill, 25, of Cherokee, was sentenced on Thursday, June 14 to 48 months in prison for his role in the 2015 murder of a male victim at Smokemont Baptist Church, announced R. Andrew Murray, U.S. Attorney for the Western District of North Carolina. U.S. District Judge Martin Reidinger also ordered Johnathan Hill to serve two years of supervised release upon completion of his prison term.

According to court filings, plea documents and the sentencing hearing, on March 29, 2015, the Cherokee Indian Police Department (CIPD) received a 911 call alerting officers to a stabbing that had taken place inside the Oconaluftee Baptist Church, commonly known as the Smokemont Baptist Church, located in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Paramedics responding to the scene determined that the male victim had been stabbed and was deceased.

According to court records, Johnathan Hill, Forrest Dakota Hill, and the victim drove to the church together. Over the course of their visit, Forrest Hill stabbed the victim with a knife during an unprovoked attack, causing the victim's death. Court records show that the victim had been stabbed at least 16 times in the chest, back, neck and elsewhere.

Following the stabbing, Johnathan Hill and Forrest Hill, who are not related, drove away from Smokemont Baptist Church. Along the way, Johnathan Hill tossed through the car window the handle of the knife he believed to have been used in the attack. After that, the two men drove to the home of Johnathan Hill's relatives, where the two men burned the clothes they wore during the stabbing.

In December 2017, Johnathan Hill pleaded guilty to a charge of accessory after the fact to second degree murder. Forrest Hill was previously sentenced to more than 16 years in prison on second degree murder charges.

The investigation was handled by the FBI, NPS and CIPD. Assistant U.S. Attorney John Pritchard of the U.S. Attorney's Office in Asheville prosecuted the case. John A. Strong, Special Agent in Charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), Charlotte Division; Jared St. Clair, Acting Chief Ranger of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park; and Chief Doug Pheasant of the Cherokee Indian Police Department made the announcement with U.S. Attorney Murray on Thursday.

Following a musical journey

CHS student accepted to University of North Carolina School of the Arts

Cherokee High School rising senior Juanita Paz-Chalacha is one step closer to her dream of becoming a professional musician. She has been selected to spend her senior year at the University of North Carolina School of the Arts (UNCSA) in Winston-Salem.

Paz-Chalacha will be one of 60 flutists accepted to complete a rigorous study of instrumental music as she lives and learns in the creative community at UNCSA. She is the daughter of Joel and Rebecca Paz-Chalacha of Cherokee.

In addition to being immersed in training in the arts through a music conservatory experience at UNCSA, Paz-Chalacha will have the opportunity to expand her academic achievement by taking AP (Advanced Placement) academic courses in such subject areas as English, mathematics, science and social studies. Academic subjects at UNCSA are infused with discussions of the arts and the role of the arts in society.

Throughout her time at the School of the Arts, Paz-Chalacha will perform in small recitals as well as elaborate productions as she is guided by faculty mentors and staff trained to understand and meet the unique needs of young artists.

Students may choose to continue their studies at UNCSA after MUSICIAN: Cherokee High School rising senior Juanita Paz-Chalacha has been selected to spend her senior year at the University of North Carolina School of the Arts (UNCSA) in Winston-Salem.

earning their high school diploma and pursue Bachelor of Fine Arts degrees in a variety of schools, including Music, Dance, Film, Drama, and Design and Production. In addition, the top ranked School of Design at UNCSA now offers a three-year graduate degree program.

Paz-Chalacha has dreamed of becoming a professional musician for several years and researched many opportunities for playing in an orchestra as well as requirements for attending UNCSA.

During a day spent visiting Vanderbilt University with her TaG (Talented and Gifted) peers in February, Paz-Chalacha gained a special one-on-one tour of Vanderbilt's Blair School of Music, where she was able to observe the school's orchestra in practice.

She received two private lessons per week from CCS Band Director Kurt Hotelling during the past school year, including instruction on her audition pieces and playing of duets.

According to Hotelling, "Part of her success rests with the excellent artist-level flute purchased for her by the School Board, Qualla Housing, Chief, and Vice Chief's offices." He refers to this flute as "the best instrument for the superior musician."

To earn admission to UNCSA, Paz-Chalacha traveled to Winston-Salem in early March to audition by playing an advanced flute concerto by Mozart before a review committee at UNCSA. Only 10 of the 60 student flutists auditioning, including college-level musicians, gained admission to UNCSA. Paz-Chalacha's advice for other students seeking advanced learning in special interest fields is, "No matter how difficult your goal may be just go out and do it, and see what happens."

Hotelling notes that for her audition, "Juanita spent five months learning and practicing the necessary music which included the concerto, a solo flute piece by J.S. Bach, which she performed at the CCS Christmas Concert, and the prerequisite scales and keys. I am extremely proud of her accomplishments and will be following her senior year of high school, and, if she chooses to pursue a professional career, I will be following her college years with keen interest and enthusiasm as well."

Paz-Chalacha, is a well-rounded academic student who excels as much in online honors math classes from North Carolina Virtual Public School (NCVPS) as she does in music. She received TaG (Talented and Gifted) services through most of her schooling at CCS. In addition, she participated in Close Up activities sponsored by CHS Social Studies teacher Heath Robertson.

"Juanita is everything a teacher could ask for in a student," said Robertson. "She is a hard worker and has a natural curiosity for learning. She will be a tremendous asset to NCSA."

Last fall, she joined Native American high school students from across the country for a focus on science as she participated in an AISES (American Indian Science & Engineering Society) convention and national conference in Colorado.

Aside from music, Paz-Chalacha has a special interest in epidemiology and entertains thoughts of pursuing a double major in both music and epidemiology in college.

"Juanita is a very determined student with high expectations for herself," said TaG teacher Dr. Beverly VanHook. "She exhibits an eagerness to learn and to teach others. I remember the first year Juanita was in high school, she volunteered to tutor math students in middle and elementary school at Cherokee to help them prepare for the NC end-of-grade tests. She is determined to be successful herself and to help others become successful as well."

JENNIFER WELCH MOTHER TOWN HEALING PROJECT

The Oconaluftee Job Corps Civilian Conservation Center (OJCCCC) and the EBCI TERO Office's Mother Town Healing Project have established a blossoming partnership. Participants from the Project have been working internships at the Center for the past couple of months.

"Oconaluftee is a Work Ready Center," said Jim Copeland, OJCCCC director. "We believe in training opportunities and job placement. Our goal is to equip TERO candidates with the skills they need to be competitive in the workforce. This may even include job placement at our Center."

There are currently three participants working in different departments. Working at the Center, the interns have a great opportunity to learn about all that Job Corps has to offer all while learning new skills to help excel in their future endeavors.

"I feel that this connection is a win-win for our Center and the interns," said Trudy Crowe. "I hear good things from all the staff about the work the interns are doing at the Center, and I feel like the interns take their jobs seriously and enjoy the learning process and working with students. The interns are providing skills and duties that help our Center."

Curt Wildcatt, EBCI TERO manager, hopes that building this partnership will hopefully bring more opportunities for other participants in the future. "Working with the Job Corps has been a missing piece that we could not offer through TERO, so I hope all of our interns will maximize this wonderful opportunity."

Nominations sought for WCU's Mountain Heritage Awards

CULLOWHEE – Western Carolina University is accepting nominations for the Mountain Heritage Awards, prestigious honors bestowed on an individual and an organization each year for contributions to or playing a prominent role in research, preservation and curation of Southern Appalachian history, culture and folklore. The awards will be presented at the 44th annual Mountain Heritage Day on Saturday, Sept. 29, on the WCU campus.

Deadline for nominations is Saturday, June 30.

There is a storied tradition of the awards and the recognition given to regional figures, institutions and organizations, beginning with the first presentation in 1976. "What do Cherokee 'Beloved Woman' Amanda Swimmer, community activist Rob Tiger, the late WCU Chancellor H.F. 'Cotton' Robinson and Mountain Faith Band all have in common?" said Pam Meister, director of WCU's Mountain Heritage Center. "And how about Dogwood Crafters, the Jackson County Genealogical Society, the Museum of the Cherokee Indian and the Young Adult Choir of Tried Stone Missionary Baptist Church? They're all recipients of WCU's Mountain Heritage Award."

Recipients are chosen by a committee comprised of regional and campus representatives. Letters of nomination should not exceed five pages and should include the full name of the individual or organization being nominated, with a website address if applicable; the mailing address of the nominee; the founding date for organizational nominees; a list of the nominee's accomplishments; a list of the awards and other recognitions received by the nominee; information about the nominee's influence in the relevant field of expertise, such as crafts, music or organizational cause; and information about the nominee's role as a teacher, advocate, leader or curator of mountain culture.

Nominations should be delivered to the Mountain Heritage Center offices, located in Room 240 of WCU's Hunter Library; mailed to Mountain Heritage Center, 1 University Drive, Cullowhee N.C. 28723; or emailed to pameister@wcu.edu.

It's not about a statue

ROBERT JUMPER
ONE FEATHER EDITOR

A reader and tribal member sent a commentary to the One Feather. She wanted to report what she felt was a racial discrimination against her during a negotiation for a vehicle at an Asheville dealership. A salesperson, through tone, language, and text conversations, seemed to confirm that the person did, indeed, have a racial bias in dealing with the tribal member.

Through her commentary and subsequent posts on social media, one of the owners of the dealership found out about the situation, apparently did some investigation, and has reported that she fired the offending employee. She also expressed her regrets that the tribal member experienced this and assured the tribal member that racism is not tolerated by the dealership.

Because of the commentary of this reader, other Eastern Band people shared their similar stories of being treated "less than" others and people trying to take advantage of them. It is a confirmation that there are still those in our society that do not believe in racial equality.

The reaction of the dealership was swift and decisive. They made the choice to not tolerate that behavior in their organization. In addition, they made a public apology on behalf of the dealership.

But, the regional media focus has been on another decision made by the dealership, to remove a fiberglass statue of "Chief Pontiac" from the dealership's lot. While one report provided a brief history of the man Pontiac, the fiberglass representation of him, according to a Smoky Mountain News report, stated, "The fiberglass statue was originally installed back when Harry's sold the now-defunct Pontiac brand. Much like the cigar-store Indians that are still used in some shops today, the Indian image was used for commerce; to sell a product. We have discussed the very negative message that society sends when it reduces a culture to a mascot for commerce or sport."

Something that is equally concerning is the weight of concern that the local media is giving this statue. A person, a Cherokee tribal member, was the object of discrimination based on race and the headlines and leads of many media outlets around the region focused on a community's beloved icon. And their love was not for Chief Pontiac or the Ottawa people. Remember, the statue was put in place to sell Pontiac automobiles. The status to them was just another cool piece of Americana that has been around for half a century. If anything, it was an affront to Indian peoples, reducing cultural identity to a sales gimmick.

It is doubtful that Chief Pontiac would have agreed to have his image used for the upbuilding of non-Indian ventures.

One historical reference quotes the Chief regarding the immigrating Europeans of the day. He said, "It is important for us, my brothers, that we exterminate from our lands this nation which seeks only to destroy us. You see as well as I that we can no longer supply our needs, as we have done from our brothers, the French....Therefore, my brothers, we must all swear their destruction and wait no longer. Nothing prevents us; they are few in numbers, and we can accomplish it."

It is the folly of journalists who believe in the "if it bleeds, it leads" mentality. There was a big negative reaction when the dealership decided that it was time to remove Chief Pontiac. Some of my colleagues saw that as negative news that would sell. But, journalists are supposed to rise above that mindset. Writing is as much about truth-telling as it is about storying telling. We are documenting history and need, to the best of our ability, to hold neutral ground in our presentation of fact.

Personally, I could care less if the statue stays or goes. Because removing the statue will not change hearts that are full of apathy, bias, and, in some cases, hate. I think it is ironic that some in the regional community want to maintain a likeness of a man who would likely just as soon see all of them dead, and keep it because it is a landmark of old America and they would miss him.

I commend the reader who wrote the commen

Facebook Question of the Week

A metal detector has been installed at the Tribal Council House. Do you think metal detectors should be installed at the Cherokee Central Schools, the New Kituwah Academy, tribal child care facilities, etc.?

Lea Wolf: Yes they should. Our children's safety and those places in my opinion take priority over the Council House. If they are concerned about someone coming in there to confront them, then I must ask what did they do in the first place for someone to be that upset with them to go to that extreme?

Trudy Crowe: Anything that makes our schools safer

Linda Marie Fry: I'm slightly amused that there are metal detectors at the Tribal Council House. I feel like it's an admission of guilt.

Doug Reed: I think our SROs (school resource officers) should have K9s also.

Wayne Wolfe: Don't forget the Youth Center!

Michael Siweumtewa: What's to stop a student from putting something outside one of the doors? Sure they will go through the metal detector with nothing on them, go to one of the doors where they put something and still bring it in. There are a lot of doors in that place.

Elsie Calhoun: If they're putting them at the Council House, then yes, they should be at the school and Kituwah (Academy) too. I think they should have already been at those schools. But, why at the Council House? What are they afraid of?

Kevin Blackfox: We had a metal detector at one time at the high school back in the day.

Charla Crowe: Yes, our children need to be protected as do our elected officials. All lives matter, whether you like them or not.

Onita Bush: Yes, yes, yes, protect our babies.

Frances Walkingstick: Definitely yes, I agree with Lea Wolf.

Gary R. Ledford: It makes absolutely no sense that they're not already there. But, priorities, right?

Sue Bradley Hornbuckle: Heck yeah

Richard Griffin: (I) 100 percent agree that they should be installed. Schools aren't safe anymore after all these mass shootings, threats, etc.

Mary Crowe: Yes!

Mary Hornbuckle: Yes, yes, yes!

Shayna George: This question is almost comical to me. If you will take yourself back to around 2000-2003, the Cherokee High School had metal detectors. Each morning, every student's bag was searched as was the student. It's already been done people.

George Martin: Yes, they should be in all of the above, anywhere there is a chance of someone getting hurt.

Connie Ross: Yes

Michelle Beanyo: Absolutely

Patricia Wildcatt: Yes

Tracy Crowe: I say no because you are basically saying to these kids that they are not trusted by the people who claim "they are there to help them succeed". If anything, they should teach better safety protocols as well as provide better support systems for these kids instead of implementing devices that will hurt these kids in the long run. Also, these devices just make the kids feel guilty when they haven't even done anything to begin with.

Herbert Wachacha: Yes

tary and those who shared their similar experiences online. All of us, regardless of race, deserve to be respected and treated fairly. The real story, in my opinion, is that a person spoke up for the themselves when they experience a wrong and it resulted in a company making changes that will benefit their workers, customers, and make for a better community to live in. Both the reader and the company did the right thing. That story doesn't bleed, but it should lead.

of submitting letters, press releases and articles to the Cherokee One Feather for publication.

A Advertisements are not articles. If you are selling something in the body of your submission, you will be asked to pay our advertising rates. Your articles should be about a public service or be at least related to community members.

B Brief is better. We want your reader to be engaged and interested in what you are saying. Our 250-word limit is not to keep you from speaking your mind. It is to ensure that you communicate in a way that will capture even the shortest of attention spans.

C Cherokee-centric is the ticket! Your material should take into account who the Cherokee One Feather audience is and be relatable for them. If you value them with your words, our community will value what you write.

The Cherokee One Feather wants to be your voice and your source for information relevant to the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians and those who are interested in our culture, history, and lifestyle. Public Notice for Proposed Cellular Tower

The Office of Planning & Development and the Office of Information Technology would like to notify all interested parties and abutting land owners of the proposed Cellular Tower that is seeking a tower permit at this time. This tower will allow the expansion of new users as well as the efficiency of the current cellular users to increase the quality of service to the community by improving our cellular coverage.

The proposed tower will be located in the following area: 1) Hyatt Cove – on Old Salt Mine Road, Cherokee, NC 28719

The notice period will run for one week, which will end on June 28th, 2018, at which time the determination of the Planning Board will be official.

All input will be documented and taken into consideration when developing this idea. If you have

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Before you adventurous Arians charge right into those new projects, take a little time to learn where you'll be going so you can avoid getting lost before you get there.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your time is devoted to career demands through much of the week. But Venus, who rules your sign, might be planning how (and with whom) you'll spend your weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't be put off by the surprising turn in the way your project is developing. You've invested enough time in it to know how to make all the necessary adjustments.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The work week goes smoothly for the most part. But a weekend visit to a place in your past could hold surprises for your future, especially where romance is involved.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A sudden attack of shyness for the usually loquacious Lion could be a sign that deep down you're not sure enough about what (or whom) you had planned to talk up in public.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Deal with that job-related problem on-site — that is, at the workplace. Avoid taking it home, where it can spoil those important personal plans you've made.

any questions or concerns, you may contact Kim Deas in the Planning Office at 828-497-1678. Or send an email to kimfisc@nc-cherokee.com.

If you would like to learn more in regards to the Tower Ordinance 287. You may request a copy from the Planning Office or the Tribal Legal Office. You may also access this ordinance online at www.municode.com. It is referenced in Chapter 62, Article 3, in the Cherokee Code Book. 6/21pd

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good time to let those favorable comments about your business dealings be known to those in a position to be helpful. Don't hide your light; let it shine.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Avoid added pressure to finish a project on deadline by steering clear of distractions. To put it somewhat poetically: Time for fun — when your tasks are done.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be uneasy about an offer from a longtime colleague. But before you reject it, study it. You might be surprised at what it actually contains.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Deal firmly with a difficult family matter. It's your strength they need right now. You can show your emotions when the situation begins to ease up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recent dispute with some co-workers might not have been completely resolved. But other colleagues will be only too happy to offer support of your actions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Let go of that Piscean pride long enough to allow someone to help you with a surprising development. That could make it easier for you to adjust to the change.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your willingness to open up to possibilities is why people like you are often among our most popular political leaders.
